Loffmark Loses Fight On Pollution Standards

NDP Holds Riding

Socred Vote Takes Plunge

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party swept to an easy poll-by-poll victory in the Burnaby-Willingdon provincial by-election Monday.

Jim Lorimer, 45-year-old Burnaby lawyer who had failed to win an aldermanic seat in the municipality's civic elections a month earlier, won the legislature seat in convincing fashion.

He headed the vote in 70 of the 72 polls, tied for the lead in the other two and piled up a vote almost equal to the combined vote of his three opponents.

The final count was Lorimer 4,728 votes; Dr. John Playfair, Social Credit, 2,529; Jim Clark, Liberal, 2,049, and Reg Grandison, Progressive Conservative, 232.

The result showed a marked swing to the NDP in the suburban Vancouver constituency since Fred Vulliamy wrested the seat from Social Credit by a 524-vote margin in the Sept. 12, 1966, general election. The seat became vacant with Mr. Vulliamy's death Oct. 20.

SIXTH SINCE 1966

Monday's byelection was the sixth in British Columbia since the 1966 election and left the standing in the 55-seat legislature at Social Credit 32, NDP 17, Liberal 6.

The 1969 session of the legislature opens Jan. 23 and the new member could take his seat four days later.

In the earlier byelections, Social Credit retained one seat and lost one to the NDP. New Democrat and Liberal members retained the other three ridings.

Monday's light vote—less than 40 per cent of the 24,210 eligible voters turned out—climaxed a campaign that produced few hard issues and a noticeable lack of public interest.

Education, housing, medical care and urban development formed common material for all candidates during the lacklustre campaign.

Although Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit administration retains a comfortable nine-seat majority in the legislature, the outcome of Monday's byelection was certain to spur NDP hopes of eventually ending the premier's long skein of general election victories, unbroken since he first took office in 1952.

And the NDP victory was equally certain to spur interest in the party's leadership convention scheduled here April 11.

'DECLINING FAITH'

Robert Strachan, the retiring NDP leader who announced last fall that he would step down this year, said Monday night he regarded the byelection result as an indication of the public's declining faith in the Social Credit party and government.

Premier Bennett was not available for comment but Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said the result showed B.C. is headed for a socialist government unless supporters of a free enterprise system stop splitting their vote.

Dr. Pat McGeer, provincial Liberal leader, also mentioned the possible splitting of the free enterprise vote.

"I hope those who supported Social Credit in the past will come to recognize this and rally to the Liberal party."

FIRE, EXPLOSIONS ROCK U.S. NUCLEAR CARRIER

PEARL HARBOR (UPI)—A fire followed by about a dozen explosions erupted on the flight and hangar decks of the nuclear carrier USS Enterprise today. A navy spokesman said casualties were expected to be heavy.

The incident occurred while the carrier, the world's largest warship, was on manoeuvres about 75 miles southwest of here in preparation for deployment to Vietnam.

30 Saved From Sea After Plane Crashes

SENTENCED to 25 years in prison today in Britain was Bruce Reynolds, 38, last of the masked band that staged the $7,500,000 Great Train Robbery five years ago. (See story Page 2.)

LOS ANGELES (CP)—The Sverre Viking, a huge Scandinavian Airlines DC-8 jetliner flying the polar route, came down in the rainswept sea Monday night as it was heading for a landing at International Airport —and floated.

Coast guard officials called it a "miracle."

Of the 45 passengers and crew aboard, four were dead, 11 missing and 30 were saved. Many were injured.

The four-engined plane, on a polar flight from Copenhagen via Seattle, Wash., splashed amid two-foot swells eight miles off shore with, passengers said, no warning.

In a scene of pandemonium, those aboard scrambled into rubber boats or atop wings and fuselage. Some fell into the sea.

There were 36 passengers and nine crew members aboard the airliner.

An armada of small boats—coast guard cutters, life guard craft and a host of private yachts from the big Marina Del Rey harbor near the airport conducted a search-and-rescue operation that lasted for hours.

RACE SURVIVORS ASHORE

They plucked survivors from the waves, raced them ashore to ambulances that took them to hospitals, and in some cases went back to look for more.

Confusion about the number of survivors continued through the night because of small private craft without radios picking up passengers.

One of the bodies was brought ashore just before midnight in a Standard Oil Co. tug and the other three bodies were aboard a private vessel named El Segundo.

The plane was still afloat hours after the crash.

Due at 6:05 p.m. the jet circled in the airport landing pattern for some 90 minutes due to a bad weather stackup of planes, then began its approach. It vanished from the radar screen at 7:40.

Chief pilot Kenneth Davis, an Englishman living in Sweden, said he made a "routine approach except for some difficulty with the landing gear."

GIVES NO DETAILS

He declined to give details, but commended his crew and the passengers for "totally heroic and disciplined action" in evacuating the plane and launching rubber boats.

The floating was "a miracle" to one coast guardsman. Another called it "kind of miraculous" that the pilot "was able to keep the ship in one piece, landing in two-foot waves and darkness."

Olaff Andersson, 23, an off-duty SAS pilot from Copenhagen and on his honeymoon, was asleep when he felt what he thought was a "hard landing."

"I looked around and realized it was a little more. Seats were thrown all over the cabin. Water started to flood in.

"I was sitting right behind the emergency door over the wing. I opened it, put on a life preserver, and began hauling people out on the wing.

"Some children were screaming, but there really wasn't any panic. The rescue operation was very efficient.

"We got into a life raft but it had a hole and sank. We all jumped into the water and swam to a second raft."

Depot Ripped By Explosion

MONTREAL (CP)—An explosion and fire today ripped apart a concrete valve house at the east-end Calex Oil Co. storage depot.

One man was believed caught under the rubble and firemen were using power drills to dig through the ruins. Three men were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

Firemen brought the blaze under control within an hour, keeping flames from spreading to huge oil tanks nearby.

Aides said he was dealing with a pile of government papers from Ottawa and also preparing for his Rome talks Thursday with the Pope and Italian political leaders.

It was the second time Trudeau had missed a conference session — the first was last Wednesday afternoon when he retired to bed with a touch of flu.

'Color Bar' Holds Spotlight

LONDON (CP-Reuters) — President Milton Obote of Uganda today accused Britain of devaluing its citizenship as a dispute blazed up over Commonwealth immigration.

The president, attending the 28-nation Commonwealth prime ministers conference, told reporters there now are two types of British citizen—white and colored.

The angry president announced that Uganda would continue to boycott all meetings of a special 17-nation group of conference officials dealing with immigration and citizenship problems. Delegates said Zambia, Tanzania and Kenya also were absent when the group held its second meeting this morning.

At the heart of the dispute lies the fate of thousands of East African Asians who hold British passports. As non-citizens they are being squeezed out of their businesses by new restrictive trade laws and Britain fears they may seek to come here en masse.

Obote said: "A white Briton who may be anywhere in the world can come here at any time—a colored Briton cannot."

Obote was asked what would happen if Britain refused to renew British passports held by 40,000 Asians in Uganda.

"If they fail to renew them I will have 40,000 ex-British citizens on my hands in Uganda," he said.

He said that although Uganda was boycotting the immigration working group, he would take part if the matter was discussed in the full conference.

WILL TRY AGAIN

Commonwealth officials planned to make fresh efforts to bring the East African states back into the immigration group but Kenya's economics minister, Tom Mboya, said Kenya wouldn't attend.

"We will stay out until Britain makes a firm statement fulfilling her pledge to the British passport holders in Kenya," Mboya said in an interview.

By British passport holders, he means the 40,000 Pakistanis and Indians in Kenya who decid-

Cabinet to Give All Directives

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has lost his cabinet war against pollution.

His defeat became clear this morning in the wake of Monday afternoon's cabinet meeting when his battle with Resources Minister Ray Williston came to a head.

After the meeting, Mr. Loffmark reluctantly admitted his promised bombshell of province-wide air and water standards under health department control has been defused and turned over to Mr. Williston, whom conservationists have bitterly criticized as willing to pay the price of pollution for quick industrial development.

Mr. Williston this morning put it another way.

"Actually I don't know on what basis the health department was preparing its set of basic standards or advice," he said.

"But the legislation clearly indicates that on air pollution the cabinet will give further directives to the Pollution Control Board after a study.

"That study is going on now under over-all supervision of the B.C. Research Council which already has made an interim report and will make its final recommendations to the Pollution Control Board.

"Now, the health department independently from this was devising some projected regulations but Mr. Loffmark was made cognizant (at Monday's cabinet meeting) of the legislation and after considering it he has taken back those proposed health department standards and that's where the matter stands at the moment."

Campbell Declines Comment

Mr. Williston confirmed that cabinet had decided to stick by the legislation which allocates jurisdiction over pollution control to his board.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who with Williston and Loffmark formed a special cabinet subcommittee on pollution the last couple of years, declined to comment on the meeting results.

But he did say: "I'm not surprised although I have no comment" when told that it appeared Mr. Loffmark would not be making his announcement of tough new standards after all.

Mr. Loffmark first announced his new plan—touching off an obvious behind-the-scenes battle in cabinet—last fall and promised he would not back down on his statutory authority as health minister to protect the health of all B.C. citizens.

Using specific sections of the Health Act which gave him full control over construction of sewers and disposal systems, he forced Richmond municipality to agree to include treatment facilities in its proposed $20 million expansion of sewers dumping effluent into the Strait of Georgia.

(Ironically, the Greater Vancouver Sewer Board today announced it will abide by a government order to install sewer treatment plants by 1975 to clean up the remaining pollution in the Fraser River and lower mainland coast which originally was opposed by the member municipalities and brought tough talk from Mr. Loffmark as well as the Pollution Control Board.)

More Than Sewage Involved

But the health minister promised to go far beyond sewage treatment with the air and water standards for the whole province and originally promised to proclaim them last September.

Since then his staff have been studying, modifying and codifying the specifications for clean air and pure water, completing its work long before Christmas.

But Mr. Loffmark has persistently put off reporters' enquiries as to when he would finally announce the standards —at the same time denying there was any split in cabinet caused by his stand.

Since the new year he told reporters the standards were ready and a press release already was drafted for the announcement which would come "any day now".

Lack of UBC Funds Led to Resignation

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Kenneth Hare, retiring president of the University of British Columbia, today reaffirmed his belief that UBC requires an immediate start on $25,000,000 worth of new buildings and $65,000,000 in other buildings required for the five-year period ending in 1974.

In an interview from London, England, he said inadequate financial support for UBC was the key reason behind his resignation, announced last weekend.

Dr. Hare declined to directly criticize the provincial government, which finances education.

Asked whether he would have tendered his resignation if more financial aid was given by the government, he replied: "I'd rather not comment on that."

Total Eclipse Hinted For Shaky Socreds

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The question no longer is whether the Social Credit government might be defeated at the next election.

The Burnaby-Willingdon byelection Monday gave the first clear hint that the question now is whether Social Credit could disappear as a political force at the next general election.

Those who find it an incredible suggestion that the government party could simply vanish likely were unable to see the signs in 1951 which led to Social Credit materializing from thin air to become the government.

And there are signs emerging—both of symbolism and substance—that B.C. may be about to make another of its periodic political half-gainer-reverse-twist-somersaults which sees the government bellyflop in futile efforts to keep pace.

LORIMER
. . . convincing win

In the sphere of substance, the hard-nosed politicos of all parties claim that practical politics is simply a case of arithmetic—the vote counts inevitably forecast the trend.

Monday's byelection tallies show that the NDP took 49.5 per cent of the vote, Social Credit garnered 26.5 per cent, the Liberals took 21.4 per cent and the Progressive Conservatives attracted 2.6 per cent of the ballots.

Only two years ago in the same riding the picture was very different: NDP 44.6 per cent, Social Credit 40.6 per cent and Liberals 14.8 per

Space Docking Hinted As Russian in Orbit

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia today launched a 41-year-old cosmonaut into earth orbit and unofficial reports suggested another manned spaceship would be sent up to join him.

Moscow radio broke its scheduled programs to announce that Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov, the second Russian in space in three months, went into orbit in his Soyuz 4 spaceship at 10:39 a.m. (2:39 a.m. EST).

The official Soviet news agency Tass quoted Shatalov, a father of two, as "feeling fine."

The unofficial reports, emanating from Soviet sources, indicated that Soyuz 5 craft with another cosmonaut aboard would be sent up to perform joint manoeuvres and possible to attempt a joint docking with Shatalov.

The last Soviet spaceman, Maj.-Gen. Georgy Beregovoy, and his Soyuz 3 craft performed joint manoeuvres with an unmanned craft named Soyuz 2 during a four-day flight in October, 1968, but he did not attempt a docking, already carried out twice earlier in the year by unmanned Soviet craft.

Within 90 minutes of the launching, Moscow television showed videotaped film of the launching of Soyuz 4 and of the interior of the cabin with Shatalov, strapped tightly to his seat, waving at the camera.

This was the first time film of a Soviet space shot has been shown the same day as the launching.

SECOND SATELLITE TRACKED BY GERMANY

BOCHUM (Reuter) — West Germany's Bochum satellite tracking station said today a second Soviet Soyuz satellite may have been launched a few hour after Soyuz IV was sent into orbit around the earth this morning.

Director Heinz Kaminski said the station started receiving signals which did not coincide with Soyuz IV's orbit.

This could either mean that a second satellite was placed in orbit or that unusual conditions were allowing Soyuz's IV's signals to be received here while it is on the other side of the earth, he said.

U.S. Marines In Big Landing

BATANGAN PENINSULA — Two battalions of U.S. marines stormed ashore here in the biggest seaborne assault since the Korean War. They were the first units of an 8,200-man southern allied force ordered to smash a longtime guerrilla sanctuary in South Vietnam, spokesman announced today.

The marines landed Monday 340 miles northeast of Saigon and a U.S. spokesman said the two battalions were pushing inland today toward a U.S. Army battalion and a South Vietnamese battalion. The three groups hope to surround an area of about eight square miles believed to hold up to 800 North Vietnamese regulars and an unknown number of guerrillas.

SNIPER FIRE

Spokesmen said the advancing troops so far have encountered only light sniper fire.

The Batangan Peninsula is only 11 miles from the U.S. Army's America Division headquarters at Chu Lai. It has been a major enemy storage area and base camp since the war with the French, and minor probes of its defences have almost always resulted in fierce fighting.

This time the southern allies have come to stay and the area's 5,000 to 10,000 population will be put into the government pacification program, U.S. spokesmen said. They added nearly all peninsula residents either actively or passively support the Viet Cong and pacification efforts are expected to be "bloody and slow."

KOREAN WAR

The U.S. Navy said the landing was the biggest since Sept. 15, 1950, when about 20,000 marines landed at Inchon during the Korean war.

About a dozen navy ships took part in the landing.

In Saigon, the U.S. command said southern allied forces have seized 700 tons of enemy weapons, munitions and rice in the last 2½ weeks, seriously cramping the Communist command's ability to launch offensives in some areas.

South Vietnamese headquarters also reported that government troops sweeping the central highlands near the city of Pleiku today killed 29 guerrillas guarding a munitions store.

ed to keep their British passports instead of taking out Kenya citizenship and now are being forced out of their jobs by Kenya orders.

Kenya, Tanzania and Uganda boycotted Monday's committee meeting designed to make it into a permanent working body to co-operate in rehabilitating displaced immigrants.

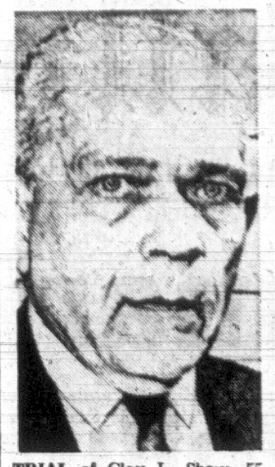

JOINS THE COMMITTEE

Canada joined the committee after Prime Minister Trudeau indicated readiness to take some of the displaced immigrants, though he did not say how many. The whole matter is under examination, he said.

A. L. Adu of Ghana, the Commonwealth's deputy secretary-general, said in an interview that the committee meetings will go on, whether the East African states show up or not. But he said he would try to do his best to have the East Africans return.

"I blame the boycott and the problems that have developed on the British press," he said. "They have done their best to wreck the committee's work by seeking reaction on questions which have still to be worked out."

Mboya maintains that when the Asians in Kenya—who hold some of the best commercial positions in that country—decided to retain their British passports, Britain had a responsibility to allow them into Britain if they ever left Kenya. The same applied to the Asians in Tanzania and Uganda.

TRIAL of Clay L. Shaw, 55-year-old New Orleans businessman, charged with conspiring to murder President John F. Kennedy, will begin Jan. 21 after Judge Edward Haggerty Monday denied two defence motions, one to throw out the indictment and the other to move the trial outside New Orleans.

. . . TOTAL ECLIPSE

cent with PCs not even bothering to run.

If the professional politicians are right, the current trend in B.C. shows the NDP with an increase in popularity of 4.9 per cent, the Liberals up 6.6 per cent, the Conservatives finally showing something—and Social Credit down a whopping 14.1 per cent.

That drop suggests progressive decline evident in the figures of the last general election and the four byelections last year is steepening into a death plunge for Social Credit.

In the sphere of symbolism, most observers believe that as Premier Bennett goes, so goes Social Credit (and the premier, fighting behind the scenes for his very job as leader, had to remind last November's convention that even a Liberal poll showed the Socred party rides his coat tails).

Well, Mr. Bennett dropped out of sight during the last week of campaigning in Burnaby-Willingdon and his office this morning said it still doesn't know where he is or even if he's in the province.

As far as it goes, the NDP performance Monday strengthens the possibility that the Socreds will be defeated, confirming the message give last summer when the official opposition took Vancouver South from the Socreds in a pitched battle.

But it's the Liberal performance in Burnaby-Willingdon which raises the question whether Social Credit will survive as a party at all.

In a liight vote in a socialist riding, the Liberals were able not only to hold their own in absolute numbers but actually gained the most ground and virtually drew abreast of the government party popular percentage.

Little wonder that Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan—who was in charge of the Socred campaign—gave his post mortem warning that free enterprisers splitting their vote could only let the socialists form the next government.

But his panicky statement was ill-advised because it only underlined a sign which the whole provincial electorate may recognize at the next general election—that the alternative to the NDP could be the Liberals instead of Social Credit.

And if that idea becomes prevalent — it's bye-bye Bennett.

And there's the rub. Because if certain elements in both the cabinet and caucus of the government are not able to convince the premier it's time for a change at the top, the ensuing dog fight will shatter and seal the doom of Social Credit.

Mr. Bennett lately has indicated he will pull a John Diefenbaker and fight his own party even harder than those across the floor.

In that kind of free-for-all—with the national Socreds but a memory and the Alberta ones preparing to vanish into Toryland—the possibility of a total eclipse of the party in B.C. becomes real.

V a ncouver-South provided the powderkeg and Burnaby-Willingdon lit the fuse for the most explosive sesssion anticipated in many years when the MLAs gather here a week from Thursday for the third sitting of the 28th Legislature.

Any keen political ear should be able to hear the roaring rehearsals already as the NDP leadership aspirants, the ambitious new Liberal leader, the desperate Socred caucus and the beleaguered premier prepare to smite each other with all the vigor of a whole clan of Macduffs.

As a final footnote on the significance of Monday's by-election: it's interesting that Premier Bennett entertained even faint hopes of winning it while his backroom braintrust was advising the government candidate to avoid the premier's embrace and not even mention the words Social Credit on his billboard ads in order to cut his losses.

So it's not just pundits who think they see a government approaching the abyss.

After Mondays cabinet meeting he was asked once again—when.

Dont ask me that question, he said glumly.

Under prodding, he admitted the press release had been scrapped for now.

"I had hoped to get it out before this but I honestly can't see now how I can produce them (standards) in the near future, he said.

He said the problem now is how to tie in the health departments proposals to the regulations which will be laid down by the Pollution Control Board under cabinet direction.

He also said a secondard problem is how to tie in the health department's plans to those of a national anti-pollution program which is being co-ordinated, as far as British Columbia is concerned, by Mr. Williston also.

health department's plans to those of a national anti-pollution program which is being co-ordinated, as far as British Columbia is concerned, by Mr. Williston also.

The resources minister said he is charged with the responsibility of developing a program for maximum resource development with the minimum economic disruption caused by an effective pollution control stance.

"It is in dealing with these complexities that there has been some difficulty experienced in our inter-departmental techniques," Mr. Williston said.

"However, where both doubt and urgency exist, such difficulties are not unusual and the situation is something we in government must resolve ourselves, without too much deplication of administrative effort," said Mr. Williston.

U.K. CRITIC

'Trendeau' For Trudeau

"Has the spellbinder lost his spell?" asks Daily Mail writer John Dickie in an article published today.

Expressing an opinion shared by Pakistani reporters at the conference, Dickie says Trudeau "has lost a lot of his glitter around the conference corridors" after first taking "most people by storm" in the British capital.

But The Mail's writer wonders whether it is fair to expect an impact from "this unusual man in such a short time."

Although ascribing significance to policy reviews launched by Trudeau in Canada, Dickie goes on to predict that "allies and friends . . . in scores of capitals will soon begin to wonder whether lack of decisions from Trudeau are a less-than-subtle camouflage for indecision."

Similar apprehension already has been expressed by this week's Economist magazine.

CALLS HIM TRENDEAU

And The Daily Telegraph bitingly confers the name "Trendeau" on the prime minister today in a satiric account of him as "swinger."

A-Bomb Spy Released

NEW YORK — The United States Court of Appeals today ordered atom spy Morton Sobell released from prison.

The Bureau of Prisons had said Sobell could be freed Jan. 10 on the basis of time off for good behavior if the appeals court credited him for time served before he was sentenced.

The court gave Sobell credit for seven months 18 days he was in jail because he could not raise $100,000 bail, prior to being sentenced in 1951 to 30 years in prison on charges of disclosing information on the atom bomb to the Soviet Union.

Robarts Warns Ottawa

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario said today the tax fight between the provinces and the Canadian government has reached the stage of "one of the most serious confrontations" in Confederation history.

Predicting that Ontario and other provinces will win their battle, Robarts repeated his demand that the federal administration turn over a bigger slice of the Canadian "growth" tax field—personal and corporation incomes taxes.

Prime Minister Trudeau already has indicated, in a speech to students last weekend, that he will refuse to do so, unless the provinces take on extra constitutional responsibilities carried out by the federal administration.

Robarts, in a speech before the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in London, said this need for higher revenues is vital since the provinces and municipalities have responsibility for rapidly-growing spending commitments.

Trudeau, in his meeting with students last Sunday, said he is willing to sit down and discuss a revision of constitutional duties. But the provinces appeared more ready to fight than to co-operate. If they needed more revenues, they should raise taxes of their own and face the political risks involved, he said.

Instead they were attempting to distort the situation by pinning the blame on the federal authorities for failing to turn over more tax revenues to the provinces, Trudeau added.

Robarts arrived in London from Rome, where he saw the Pope and conferred with the Italian government, and from Zurich where he undertook "satisfactory negotiations" in connection with Ontario borrowing requirements.

Trudeau flies to Rome to see the Pope Thursday.

Flu Empties Schools In Cariboo

WILLIAMS LAKE, B.C. (CP) — Absenteeism has soared to 25 per cent in the Williams Lake junior and senior secondary schools prompting a provincial health officer to declare a flu epidemic in the Cariboo.

More than 250 pupils are absent with flu and flu-like symptoms and this, says Dr. William Meekison, is an epidemic.

Dr. Meekison said the symptoms were typical of most kinds of flu. There was a strong supposition that the flu was of the Hong Kong variety but this would not be known until tests were made, he said.

Blood samples were sent to Vancouver from 100 Mile House for testing, Dr. Meekison said, but results would not be known for several days.

Meanwhile, Dr. Meekison said he would survey schools and employers in other parts of his health unit areas to determine the extent of the outbreak.

'I HAD A GOOD TIME'

Last of Great Train Robbers Goes to Jail

AYLESBURY, England — Bruce Reynolds, the last of the masked band that staged Britain's $7,500,000 Great Train Robbery five years ago, was sentenced today to 25 years in jail.

The 38-year-old antique dealer, pursued by Scotland Yard from France to Mexico in a relentless hunt, pleaded guilty to the robbery and declared: "Anyone who thinks that crime pays must be mad."

WASN'T A LEADER

The prosecution said Reynolds told detectives: "It is true that I took part in this robbery but I want to make two things clear: I took no part in any violence and I was no mastermind . . . I was no more the leader than any of the others. . . .

"Anyone who thinks crime pays must be mad. Recently, it has been driving me silly."

Reynolds had three passports when he was captured, issued in the names of Miller, Firth and Green. They showed he had fled with his family to Mexico, Canada, the United States, France, Belgium and Germany.

He had bank accounts in Britain and Mexico, the prosecutor said.

"I am lucky I lasted as long as I did," Reynolds told Butler. "I had a good time."

Dapperly dressed in a grey business suit, Reynolds confessed that he plotted with other gang members—now in jail—to rob the train in 1963, and took part in stealing the 120 mailbags.

Watching impassively from the crowded courtroom was Detective Chief Supt. Tommy Butler, retired head of Scotland Yard's famed Flying Squad who tracked Reynolds relentlessly after the robbery. He arrested him Nov. 8 in a rented house at the seaside resort of Torquay.

ONE ESCAPED PRISON

Only about $1,000,000 of the loot from the robbery has been found, despite the capture of Reynolds, the last of 15 men arrested for the masked raid. But one gang member, who was convicted, escaped prison and is still at large.

One report said Scotland Yard detectives recently found more of the money hidden in British banks, but no figure has been disclosed and one police official said: "The hunt for the money will never stop."

For Butler, a Sherlock Holmes of modern times, Reynold's plea of guilty was a triumph. But one more step in smashing the gang remains for Butler, now retired from Scotland Yard but still working privately on the case. It is to recapture the gang member still at large—Ronald Biggs, who escaped from London's Wandsworth Prison in 1965.

"I am glad it is all over," Reynolds told detectives when he was arrested, the court heard today. "It is no life for anyone, always shifting about. I had been thinking for some time of giving myself up."

DRIVEN FROM CELL

Under heavy police escort, Reynolds was driven from his top security cell to this market town 35 miles north of London and hustled into the courthouse more than an hour before the trial began.

Reynolds' guilty plea was followed by a long account from prosecutor Howard Sabin of how the masked gang stopped the 12-car diesel express train Aug. 8, 1963, clubbed the engineer and the fireman, uncoupled the mail car and forced the engineer to pull it half a mile with the locomotive.

Handcuffing the train operators and forcing the post office workers to lie down on the floor, the gang formed a human chain and passed the 120 loaded mailbags into a truck on the road and sped to a farmhouse hideout.

Watched by his wife in sunglasses, Reynolds listened quietly as the prosecutor told how his fingerprints were found on a ketchup bottle and a Monopoly game at the farmhouse.

Separatist Gains Feared If Firms Leave Quebec

NEW YORK (CP) — Withdrawal of capital from Quebec would give separatist leaders a strong argument for independence, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said today.

He said the separatist movement has no power and lacks popular support. However, it remained a potential force that had to be taken into consideration "if, for example, the economic situation were to deteriorate seriously."

Pelletier was speaking to members of the Compressed Gas Association here.

After outlining federal measures taken in Canada to cope with the separatist problem, Pelletier said investment is an aspect that concerns Americans directly.

"If, in a moment of panic, Canadian and American investors were to begin to withdraw their capital from Quebec, they would be providing separatist leaders with one of their best arguments in favor of independence."

The influx of capital into Quebec had created new jobs.

"A policy of restriction would lead inevitably to an increase in the rate of unemployment."

If Quebec's economic situation was to improve—"and we must not be afraid to say that such improvement requires substantial foreign investment"—Quebecers would never attempt to separate.

Pelletier said the problem of maintaining Canada's political sovereignty "at a time when her economic sovereignty is gravely threatened" is of much greater importance than separatism.

He urged Americans to do business in Canada with care and tact, respecting Canadian customs and interests and realizing that Canada isn't the "51st American state."

"When you have learned to know Canada, to look upon her as a different country, the problem of her survival will disappear."

He said current American ignorance of Canada "denotes a lack of respect bordering on contempt." This ignorance was "the principle obstacle to the best possible relations between the two countries."

Arabs to Beef Up Boycott of Israel

DAMASCUS, Syria — The Arab states plan to tighten their 16-year economic boycott of Israel and foreign firms that do business with the Jewish state, a spokesman said today. But he did not announce what action would be taken.

Mohammed Mahjob, commissioner general of the Arab League's boycott Israel movement, said that measures "to plug the gaps in the siege" would be approved at a conference in Qatar Jan. 20.

Currently on the Arab black list are firms that have main or branch factories in Israel; firms that hold shares in Israeli businesses; firms that render contractural or technical aid to Israeli industry; firms searching for natural resources in Israel; banks that do more business in Israel than in Arab states, and those that give the right to use names, trademarks or patents to Israeli concerns.

Shipping and air lines are blacklisted if they carry Jewish immigrants or military cargo to Israel. The boycott regulations also apply against film stars and movie companies that are deemed to serve Israeli propaganda or financial interests.

North America's Ford Motor Co. and Coca Cola are on the black list. To avoid a similar fate, many large firms such as Renault of France shut down their assembly plants in Israel.

New Peace Proposals Rejected by Israel

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Israel today rejected the latest Russian proposal for peace in the Middle East.

The foreign office called the proposals a political manoeuvre by the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, in the Knesset (parliament), Israel's premier Levi Eshkol denied reports of an Israeli military buildup along Arab borders.

Loffmark Maintains Hospital Pay Freeze

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Monday said there would be no second look for his decision to freeze salaries of the upper echelons in B.C. hospitals.

"The seniors will have to mark time until the lower echelons catch up," he told reporters who asked if he still stood by his announcement that B.C. Hospital Insurance Service would freeze its present contributions for the salaries of any hospital officials earning $12,000 a year or more.

He denied that his order was an implication the government planned to boost salaries of all lower income civil servants at the expense of senior staff in the promised round of raises for government employees.

"I'm not implying anything. It's the civil service commission that handles salary negotiations," he said.

He confirmed that he would be meeting B.C. hospital administrators in Vancouver Jan. 17 to discuss the freeze which is outside of civil service commission jurisdiction.

POISONOUS JEWELRY OFF MARKET

MONTREAL (CP) — Most poisonous tropical beads have been cleared from the Quebec market in a campaign which began Dec. 10, a federal food and drug inspector said today.

Noel N. Sabbagh of the federal health department reported that about 1,500 pieces of jewelry containing the beads had been destroyed by fire. Most boutiques and stores in Quebec had co-operated by preventing sale of the jewelry.

The beads are shiny, egg-shaped, and red or orange with a black spot. They are imported from Japan, India and South America and may cause death within minutes if chewed or sucked.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Union Chaos Feared In U.K. Steel Firms

HICKEL
... bugs nature lovers

LONDON — A bitter inter-union quarrel poses the threat of chaos in Britain's state-owned steel industry. It could lead to the first nation-wide stoppage in the industry since the 1926 general strike.

Sixteen unions representing 150,000 manual workers issued orders today to their members to ignore any instructions given by foremen or members of two white-collar unions.

The ban comes into effect Jan. 26. Said union leader Dai Davies: "The effect of our decision will be catastrophic. It is bound to be."

Executives of the British Steel Corp., which administers the nationalized industry, conceded that production at plants all over the country would be disrupted quickly. That, in turn, would deny raw materials to many industries engaged in the vital export drive.

The 16 old-established unions have repeatedly claimed that their members are being "poached" by the two white collar unions— the Association of Scientific, Technical and Managerial Staffs and the Clerical and Administrative Workers.

What brought the dispute to white heat was the Steel Corporation's decision to recognize the two unions as negotiating bodies, a status they never had before.

Davies, who is secretary of the biggest union of the angry 16, told reporters: "The corporation is trying to turn the clock back 50 years and introduce anarchy into an industry where the unions have been able to work out spheres of interest without an argument."

Exports worth the equivalent of more than $6,000,000,000 in a full year would be in trouble if the government fails to prevent a steel stoppage. The automobile and engineering industries would be hardest hit.

Management officials said they were relying on the Trades Union Congress to work out a formula that might avert an industrial disaster.

Senate Likely To Approve Nixon Cabinet

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President-elect Nixon's cabinet choices start coming under United States Senate scrutiny today but only Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska seems fated to get any kind of a hard-knuckled going over as prospective interior secretary.

The Senate has never rejected a presidential cabinet nominee and the record seems likely to remain intact this time despite the continued Democratic party's control of Congress with an incoming Republican administration.

Hickel, 49, is a self-made millionaire in the go-go tradition of the northern frontier. But he has raised the hackles of assorted interests, chiefly conservation-minded people dedicated to preserving birds, trees and the wide-open spaces.

He has also puzzled and perhaps worried some aspects of the huge petroleum industry by indicating determination to find U.S. markets for Alaska's newly-discovered oil reserves.

SILENT ON POLICY

Generally, these first encounters between the new boys and Congress are bland, punchless affairs and those starting today may be exceptionally so because of the tight rule of silence on policy matters that Richard Nixon has imposed.

As the New York Times observes, even with the Nixon take-over Jan. 20 now less than a week away, his administration remains hard to figure because it is "so passionately uncommitted on so many things."

Appearing today was Chicago banker David Kennedy, incoming treasury secretary who was burned at his first news conference by refusing to say the price of gold would be maintained at the official level of $35 an ounce. European speculators immediately launched a wave of buying on the assumption the price might rise.

New defence boss Melvin Laird, a long-time congressman, also will be questioned as well as the incoming secretary of health, education and welfare, John Finch.

Hickel's first appearance is Wednesday and so is incoming State Secretary William Rogers.

SOUNDS LIKE ALASKAN

Hickel's crime, say his supporters, is to continue to sound like an Alaskan who favors development of the state's 586,400 square miles, most of it wilderness. Hickel is an outspoken admirer, he says, of the Canadian policy in the north of government doing the initial spadework to pave the way for free enterprise.

But that kind of talk rubs against strong mood of conservation rooted in the populous U.S. east, where more parkland and protection rather than less is the sacred cow.

Hickel is going to be asked to explain statements that he opposes "conservation for conservation's sake," that it is wrong to "lock up land for no reason" and that if water pollution standards are set too high, industry is handicapped.

Oil, pollution, power, the nation's 750,000,000 acres of federal land including parks, Indians, Eskimos and wildlife all fall under the interior department.

Hickel has quietly been visiting congressmen to attempt to explain away any misconceptions his blunt off-the-cuff statements seem to have created but will be grilled longer than any of his colleagues if Senate threats come true.

Nuclear Pact Call Opposed by India

LONDON — India acted today to thwart a British call for Commonwealth backing of the pact aimed at stopping the spread of nuclear weapons.

The issue arose behind the scenes in exchanges on a communique being prepared for the 28-nation summit conference of leaders representing more than 700,000,000 people on five continents. It is due for discussion again today.

As a nuclear power and prime initiator of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, Prime Minister Wilson's government wanted the communique to include a declaration that would have expressed unanimous Commonwealth backing for the controversial pact.

The British, like their American and Russian fellow signatories, maintain the dangers of nuclear war would be lessened if states with a nuclear potential would voluntarily forgo the right to build such weapons.

RESISTS THE MOVE

But India, on the threshold of nuclear power itself, has been resisting the move. Senior Indian officials argued in committee that the treaty discriminates in favor of existing nuclear powers.

They maintained it aims at perpetuating a monopoly of nuclear military capacity for the great powers without imposing on them any obligation to scale down their nuclear arsenals.

Thus, the Indians argued, non-nuclear nations which accept the limitations would assume a condition of eternal military inferiority without receiving in return any guarantees of greater security.

Britain and India rallied supporters for their positions. Canada and Australia were among the most important of Britain's backers, among other reasons because their security is insured by the nuclear power of their American allies.

Tanzania and Zambia lined up behind India, among other reasons because they suspect the white supremacy state of South Africa has the capacity to make and deliver nuclear weapons.

The tussle seems certain to end in disagreement with the final communique likely to include both the British and Indian points of view. The conference winds up Wednesday.

Backlash Likely

BURNABY (CP) — Extreme public reaction was cited Monday as the main danger facing student dissidents at Simon Fraser University. Richard Lester, a member of the SFU board of governors, told the Burnaby Chamber of Commerce that "when you are kicked in the shins, it hurts—and you may do a great deal of damage when you kick back."

'Broader Ties Required With Latin America'

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada should seek to establish broader relations with Latin America before considering whether or not to join the Organization of American States, says Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

"But if Canada were to join, we should not do so before having established the relations needed to make joining worthwhile," Mr. Pepin told a meeting Monday night of the Inter-American Association.

The trade minister was among a five-member ministerial mission to South and Central America last July. The fact-finding tour was part of the federal government's foreign policy review. A preliminary report is to be tabled in the Commons shortly.

Mr. Pepin did not elaborate on his reference to the OAS—a body Canada has been pressed to join from time to time—saying the full implications of the mission would be known only when the review is completed.

In its economic relations with Latin America, he forecast that Canada could obtain "maximum impact and be of maximum assistance" by directing its limited foreign aid resources to countries or areas with certain forms of economic development or "where Canadian and Latin American interests are complementary."

'LANGUAGE-RIGHTS BILL COULD HIT INVESTORS'

QUEBEC (CP)—A brief to the Quebec government's education committee by the Quebec branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association says the proposed language-rights bill may "adversely affect this province in attracting" the required human and financial resources.

Public hearings on the legislation, introduced in late 1968 to ensure English-language education in public schools, begin today.

The bill was sent to the education committee for study under pressure from nationalist elements in the province and within the ruling Union Nationale party.

The CMA brief says the problem of attracting resources into the province could be affected by "the implication in the bill that children of persons settling in this province may be arbitrarily channeled into the French-language school system.

"The degree to which Quebec industry will be able to absorb future graduates will depend ... on government policies which foster a climate of confidence to investors."

SEEKS A CHOICE

The interests of all Quebec residents can only be served by guaranteeing:

—"That in those areas where there is a sufficient student population to justify French and English language school systems, the right of all to choose, for themselves or for their children, between the two.

—"The establishment of standards of instruction which will ensure that all graduating students have a working knowledge of both languages.

The association strongly supports the part of the bill "which is designed to provide a greater degree of bilingualism to students educated in English.

"Without similar provisions for mastery of the English language, however, it must be concluded that there is no recognition of the need for guaranteeing students educated in French a comparable proficiency in their second language."

This was a "serious oversight, particularly in the business world where mobility is so important."

Education rights for Quebec's English-speaking minority went unchallenged until the Roman Catholic school commission in St. Leonard, a suburb of Montreal, voted last June to eliminate English-language instruction, starting at the Grade 1 level.

PUTS FRENCH FIRST

The St. Leonard board is controlled by a group known as Mouvement pour l'integration scolaire, which maintains that French should be the language of instruction and English a second language in public schools.

Before Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand introduced the bill Dec. 9, he was accused of betraying French-Canadians and a demonstration headed by the movement attracted more than 3,000 persons.

Introducing the bill, Mr. Bertrand said he hoped it would be adopted before the end of the session.

After heart troubles sent the premier to hospital in December, the government bowed to nationalist pressure and withdrew the bill prior to second reading and sent it to the education committee.

The CMA brief is one of at least 66 from English- and French-language associations and industrials expected to be heard by the committee, chaired by Jerome Proulx, Union Nationale member for St. Jean. He is considered a nationalist.

MEDIATION APEARANCE BID VETOED

VANCOUVER (CP) — International Woodworkers of America officials Monday refused to accept a challenge issued by IWA's regional president, Jack Moore, who urged the union to appear before the B.C. mediation commission.

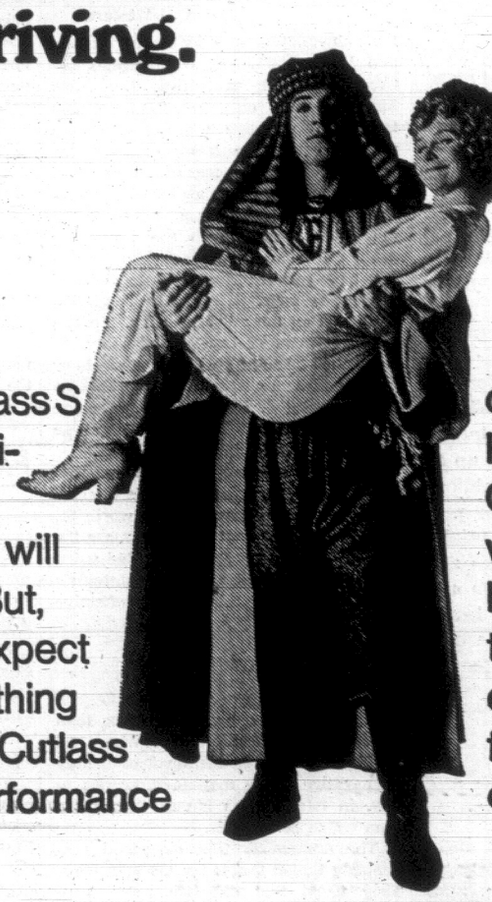

The unions, which has said it will not agree to appear before the commission, said in a statement Mr. Moore's views were personal, and would be dealt with by the IWA.

It added its decision not to appear in any commission hearings was unanimous.

The Murky Future

WITH MANY EXPERTS SEEing pollution of our environment not only as an inconvenience or health hazard but as a definite threat to man's continued life on this planet, the demands for improvement are now being heard at every level in many lands. The technological triumphs that have enabled man to combat insect and disease problems are themselves turning into defeats; the prodigies of industrial development on which we pride ourselves may themselves prove our undoing.

Although there are many demands to restore lakes, rivers, land and atmosphere to their original natural purity, we may as well recognize that we shall never be able to accomplish this. The only remedy would be to remove almost all the evidences of man's productivity and presence from the earth. The increase in populations alone ensures that our environment must become increasingly affected by wastes of all kinds, and for many of these the cure will be difficult to devise and still more to implement.

A second fact of modern life which we must recognize is that pollution control will become an integral part of the expense of maintaining ourselves on the earth, and that this expense will inevitably increase.

* * *

And a third is that rather than achieve perfect removal of air and water pollution we shall have to be content with holding it to a level which will be generally acceptable by aesthetic as well as health and efficiency standards.

While these considerations imply failure to achieve perfection, they need not connote an inability to impose methods and restrictions which will establish limits of tolerance. But it is obvious that much must be done and many of our heretofore accepted practices must be reassessed.

Recent studies of the effects of pesticides, for instance, indicate that their lethal effects are far more widespread than had been supposed —more severe even than the warnings of Rachel Carson in her Silent Spring. Peregrine falcons, which never come into contact with DDT as applied to crops by man, are being wiped out through accumulations of the poison in the wildlife on which they feed. Scattergun techniques in the use of poisons have eradicated helpful insects as well as harmful ones and upset the balance of nature in scores of ways. Meat and milk eaten by man are found to hold alarming amounts of harmful chemical substances put into circulation by man himself. Obviously a whole new approach to man's interference with the natural world must be initiated.

Industrial processes in many places turn rivers into lifeless, sediment-choked streams; darken the air and threaten to alter climates; kill wildlife and destroy pleasure areas. Even more serious effects are seen in long-term predictions that the oxygen supply of our atmosphere is being diminished with consequent deterioration of the environment on which mankind must depend for life.

* * *

It is only comparatively recently that governments have given attention to such considerations, and even now the reaction is slow and in many cases reluctant. Partly this is failure to realize the magnitude of the problem, partly a desire to avoid interference with the economic machine which we have evolved, and partly, too, an attempt to postpone the great expenses which will be necessary to regain and maintain an acceptable pollution level in many areas.

One estimate puts the amount required to assure clean air and water in the United States for the next 30 years at $5 to $10 billions annually. A parallel estimate for a similar program in Canada up to 1980 is set at $350 to $600 millions a year. These represent major programs which will add substantially to the budgets of governments and industry. But they will prove unavoidable, and they will not lessen by postponement. This is the world we are making.

Back in the Big League

CANADA IS NOT ALONE IN agonizing about what military stance it should take in the world. Japan is in the throes of a national debate something like that touched off by Prime Minister Trudeau's questioning of some of our long-time policies.

At the end of the Second World War Japan was compelled to disband all her armed forces and renounce war forever. Within five years however the situation in the Far East was transformed by the Korean war and the United States was urging Japan to rearm. Thus began the reconstruction of ground, naval and air commands into what is termed the "Self-Defence Forces."

Now the rebuilding has reached the stage of a government decision to build a supersonic fighter-bomber that will have a cruising range reaching China and Siberia. Socialist and other opposition critics have raised a storm but Premier Eisaku Sato is in a strong position, having just won a third term and installed a team of cabinet aides favoring the defence build-up.

Sato will have to pay a price for this venture, however, that could have far-reaching effects on Japanese politics. To cover the cost of producing 130 F-4 Phantom jets and other new weapons he proposes to raise the national defence budget by 12 per cent. There is little doubt that part of the reason for Japan's spectacular post-war economic growth has been the comparatively small amount that has been spent on arms. Now the country appears to be returning to the costly "big league" of defence and the pampered Japanese taxpayer is going to start feeling the pinch. He may not like it.

Don't Turn the Clock Back

IT IS HARD TO FATHOM WHAT Health Minister Loffmark had in mind when he raised the spectre of the death penalty for thrice-convicted narcotics traffickers. Mr. Loffmark didn't exactly say he was in favor of such policy, but said it had been discussed at a meeting of provincial health ministers. Some other ministers have questioned this, but Mr. Loffmark has brought the subject up in any case and it should be quickly squelched.

The evil wrought by drug peddlers can not be over-stated, but that is no justification for an emotional response. Canada long debated the wisdom of capital punishment and decided a year ago to abolish it for a test period of five years. The only exceptions are in the case of a policeman or prison guard murdered while performing his duties. To consider the addition of another category at this juncture would be inadvisable.

Countries everywhere are moving away from the death penalty because they are convinced it is barbaric and fails to act as a deterrent. In the United States, although capital punishment is still possible in 37 of the 50 states, there was not one execution during 1968. The last hanging in Canada was in 1962. It would be a mistake to try to turn back the clock now.

Marsh Gas

FROM OTTAWA — BY MAURICE WESTERN

Little for Consumers in Kennedy Round

AMONG ill-disposed persons there has long lurked a suspicion that Canadian manufacturers enjoy a good deal more protection than they admit or deserve, and more than is good for the country. It is agreeable to read in a press release that this view is shared by so learned and dispassionate a body as the Economic Council of Canada.

Western

The latest study of the subject, prepared by James Melvin and Bruce Wilkinson, distinguishes between nominal protection—the rates formally set out in the customs tariff—and effective protection for the manufacturer. The latter concept was originally developed, more than a decade ago, by Professor Barber of Winnipeg.

Protection enables a producer to mark his goods up to the prevailing world price plus the import duty. But he is not the sole contributor to the finished product he sells. In effect he is getting protection on the value he adds, through his investment of capital and labor, to the raw or partially finished materials or parts which go into the merchandise being marketed. Plainly, his advantage will be greatest if he can obtain these working materials tariff-free.

Suppose there are no tariffs and that the Canadian manufacturer adds 40 cents in value to a finished product worth $1. A tariff of 20 per cent would increase the final value to $1.20. But this added value is 50 per cent of the manufacturer's contribution and this is his effective protection.

Effective Protection

Various cases are possible. Effective protection may be higher or lower than nominal protection; it may, where all tariffs are equal, be identical, or it may be negative if the manufacturer has to pay, in total, duties higher than those from which he benefits.

The economists first examined pre-Kennedy Round tariffs for 133 industries. They found that effective rates were generally higher—from 1½ to two times nominal rates.

While space forbids a detailed examination, the curious reader of the Melvin-Wilkinson report will turn compassionately to those industries which suffer most loudly and habitually in public. Consider, for example, electronics. The nominal rate on major appliances was 19.7 per cent; effective protection by one calculation was 31.4, by another 41.5. On household radios and TVs, the nominal rate of 20.7 contrasted with effective rates between 36 and 51.4.

The textile story is roughly comparable. Our knitting mills, for example, were supposed to enjoy protection of 31.1 per cent against the encroaching foreigners. Effective rates were by one calculation 64.9 per cent, by another 77.1. Fur goods, with nominal rates of 25 per cent, actually enjoyed effective protection of 98.9 or, by another reckoning 103.4.

It is of interest that very large discrepancies appeared in the case of flour, and also vegetable oil mills. For the former the nominal rate of 8.8 per cent compared with effective protection of 31.9 (or 38.1). Nominal rate of 4.7 was in even more startling contrast to effective rates of 34.5 and 35.9.

The Kennedy Round is supposed to bring about liberating changes—see any speech of Mr. Mitchell Sharp in his former role as trade minister and negotiator. To obtain a clearer view of the new situation, the investigators examined 32 of the above industries. They found that in 40 per cent of them, there was little change in effective rates. In one-third the level of effective protection was increased. In only one-tenth of the cases did the reduction exceed 10 per cent.

In addition to the protection afforded by the government, the subject of this latest study, our threatened manufacturers enjoy what might be termed natural protection. In competition with the foreign supplier, they benefit from a variety of cost differentials. Serving a home market, they save in transportation, on packaging, sometimes on insurance, frequently on advertising, and so on. In many cases such items would add up to a substantial advantage, even in conditions of free trade.

No Great Hazard

Taking all these things into consideration, the hazards of the Kennedy Round do not appear very great. As the investigators observe: "Negotiations which result in little or no reduction in Canadian tariffs, while possibly a victory for the negotiators, do little to spur on Canadian manufacturers to improved performance."

In the words of the release: "The Economic Council believes that this relatively high level of protection inhibits greater specialization and longer production runs in Canadian manufacturing. And this situation, in turn, increases costs and restrains productivity improvements in manufacturing, an area in which the Canada-U.S. disparity in output per employed person is wider than for the economy as a whole."

What will consumers get from a "victory for the negotiators"? Obviously, not very much.

FROM PARIS — BY C. L. SULZBERGER

Israeli Lesson in Losing Friends

ANY professor of strategy could cite either the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia or the Israeli raid on Beirut airport as simultaneously embodying the acme of what to do and what not to do. Each exercise in its own way was militarily perfect and politically insane.

The Russians spent so much time last summer manoeuvering the terrain that when they finally decided to strike they fooled everyone — friends, enemies and Czechs. The takeover was swift and efficient, aided by carefully selected fifth columnists. But when the dirty work was done, it soon became plain that Moscow had thought of everything except what to do with Czechoslovakia once it had it.

Likewise, on a much smaller scale, Israel's impeccable helicopter raid on Beirut airport was magnificently competent but politically senseless. It achieved no basic and enduring purpose; indeed, the reverse may yet prove true.

Russia lost an ally (because the Czechoslovakian people aren't going to forget the experience) and sacrificed its reputation for detente and international respectability. Israel lost the tacit tolerance of Lebanon, hitherto least hostile of its neighbors, and a great deal of foreign support.

The U.N. security council unanimously condemned the action and, although the United States didn't interrupt its program to reinforce Israeli air strength, Washington was sharply critical. Even Britain, sympathetic to Israel ever since the Suez War, expressed vivid distaste and took the occasion to review its sale of anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan.

France has been increasingly anti-Israel ever since the Algerian question was settled and Paris decided to regain Arab support. The Beirut raid ended even any vestigial pretence of French neutrality in Palestine. Now de Gaulle has ordered an embargo on deliveries of any military equipment to its former little ally; not only the 50 Mirage jets for which Israel has paid but which it won't receive; even spare parts for old equipment can no longer be sent.

Peace Pulpit

There is a curious relationship between the political aftermath of the Soviet and Israeli actions. Moscow has been doing all it can since Aug. 21 to revive a peace-loving world image. The mere fact that the Middle East situation has perceptibly worsened gives Russia a chance to preach there in the name of peace.

The Middle East is so complicated, tense, rich and important that it particularly interests the Great Powers, and Soviet envoys have a legitimate excuse to seek new contacts in Washington, London and Paris. Whether Moscow's present flurry of activity helps prospects of settlement or not, the appearance is what counts right now for Kremlin image-makers.

Likewise, Israel's brutual riposte for acts of piracy against its planes diminished its world support. The Russians, eager to erase the stain of Czechoslovakia, successfully urged France to advance the date of a scheduled bilateral meeting. Moscow then offered large enough contracts to French industry to partially offset losses suffered in the arms embargo against Israel, an important French customer.

The last thing Israel wished was to have its Beirut raid help Russia out of its self-dug Czechoslovakian pit. Yet this, paradoxically enough, is the principal political result. Soviet ambassadors have since been making propaganda hay out of the lowering Middle East crisis.

Four-Power Framework

The probable framework for an eventual conference on Palestine would be four powered, as always envisioned by France. If there should be a four-power adjudication now, Israel could at best expect support from only Washington and London. Paris, previously a reluctant neutral, today is quite as pro-Arab as Moscow — or, at least, as anti-Israeli.

This leaves Jerusalem in an acutely difficult spot. If there is no serious new diplomatic initiative another round of war seems inevitable, sooner rather than later. With its French-made airforce deprived of spare parts and the first American F-4 fighters expected only late this year, Israel's technical advantage is perceptibly shrinking. Now its political backing has started to diminish. That, in the end, could prove equally important.

It is an odd quirk of current history than two military perfections should have been so politically imperfect. It is an even odder quirk that because of the second, Israel's, the first, Russia's, may be forgotten far sooner than would normally have been the case.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times Jan. 14, 1909.

Hot air is better than steam or hot water for heating purposes. This seemed to be the conclusion reached by members of the school board today. Attention was drawn by superintendent Paul to the fact that while two schools using hot air were warm enough for pupils to continue studies during the cold spell, all other schools were closed. The plumbers were still trying to locate the trouble, he said.

Time for Restraint

Calgary Herald

Calgary aldermen are being invited to raise their own pay from $4,100 to $5,900 a year.

If they have any self-respect they will reject the invitation.

The job of alderman is not worth that much.

The reasons Mayor Leslie advanced in support of his recommendation may appeal to some aldermen. But they are unlikely to bring tears to the eyes of overburdened taxpayers — tears of sympathy for the aldermen, that is.

For example, that stale old proposition that, if the job doesn't offer an attractive wage, good men will not run for council. Really good men, men interested in rendering two or three years of public service to their city in terms of meetings now and then to keep civic policy on the rails, are not thinking in terms of how much money they will make out of it.

What salaries in the $6,000 a year range are more likely to do is attract people of lesser stature to seek seats on council. . . .

The tendency to boost pay in municipal circles, both on the appointive and elective levels in this city, is going beyond all reasonable limits.

There is not a better group to set a good example of restraint than the elected officials themselves.

Appreciation

Now that our city's streets and thoroughfares have been restored to normal conditions and traffic flows unimpeded in its normal channels, it seems only fitting that we pedestrians should express our appreciation of the general courtesy and consideration shown by vehicular traffic throughout those few trying days. Forced by long stretches of uncleared sidewalks, which were usable only by the nimble and sure-footed, we were often obliged to use the roadways, where strictly we had no right to be, and the vehicular traffic was certainly most careful and co-operative. This was cordially appreciated by those of us who, like the Old Grey Mare, "just ain't what we used to be," and made the necessary business of getting around much less exhausting than it would otherwise have been.—William H. Currie, Aberdeen Hotel.

"Battle of Mines"

I must congratulate you on John Mika's article "We must win Battle of Mines," setting forth statements made by Opposition Leader Mr. Rober Strachan. I feel a subject of such great importance should have been on Page 1 and not Page 21.

The problems of land, air and water pollution are of great interest to a great many serious-thinking people today, and it seems to me members of government who devote time and energy to fighting serious exploitation of our resources in one way or another, should be given help by the news media, to better inform the public. This article made a serious impact upon me in view of the fact that I had watched a documentary on strip mining in the United States and parts of Canada.—C. M. Renaud, 349 Island Highway.

Carter Needed

I would like to refer to the letter from your correspondent Mrs. A. C. Cooper, "Raise Income-tax."

Mrs. Cooper follows the brain-washed pattern of blaming our troubles on "men asking for higher wages" and no thought is given to the fantastic profits being made by the banks, trust and other financial institutions and in fact by all industry especially the food stores. Thousands of dollars are made daily in real estate and other financial transactions and not one nickel of tax is charged on such transactions.

What we require more than anything is an implementation of the Carter tax proposals; at present we have the most unjust form of taxation in the democratic Western world. However as long as the present system of political funds continues there will be no change, as those who pay the piper call the tune. It is only natural that those who pay large sums into the coffers of the major political parties are not interested in any change which migh help the "little Joe" and upset the present unfair "status quo." — M. P. B. Wrixon, 1254 Rockland.

REITH LECTURES—2

Balance of Fear

By Lester B. Pearson

While the two great blocs still exist in the world, they are becoming increasingly represented by Moscow and Washington.

The other members of the bloc are less integrated into the control centres of superpowers; and the uncommitted are more confident in their non-commitment.

If there is to be any significant development in co-operative co-existence between Washington and Moscow — and in the last few years some progress was being made—it will have to be on some other basis than mutual regard.

We Anglo-Saxons always like to feel that whatever we do is based on some ennobling and worthy emotion. This kind of brotherly approach makes us feel decent and virtuous.

Mutual Interest

But no progress in detente with the Soviet Union and its allies can be made on that basis.

It will be done only by seeking and finding areas of mutually profitable co-operation; based on mutual self-interest and any good faith that may be created.

For example, the Soviet Union has, on occasion, been just as determined as the United States not to be dragged into a war by rashness or an accident of policy on the part of an ally.

Again the two super-powers have found a common interest in trying to stop the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and they have worked together quite constructively in this field.

There is dawning recognition of a community of scientific interest, which has increased as we have begun to move out of our own planet.

Not Publicized

A common political concern has been shown at the United Nations on certain matters—though usually it has been disguised from the uninitiated; and in any event not given the publicity that the more customary bitter verbal conflicts always secured.

This common concern between the Soviet Union and the United States has been shown in their similar attitude to certain bush fires which neither side wished to see spread.

Most important of all, there is now a common fear of Communist China in Washington and Moscow, and there is nothing like a common fear to bring people together.

The Soviet Union could have been a lot more difficult in Vietnam than they have been during the last three years, if they had not feared not only the United States in Vietnam, but Communist China in Vietnam; and on their own borders.

Must Compromise

If co-operation is to develop, if we are to make any progress, there will also have to be compromises on specific issues. At times these compromises will be very unsatisfactory; Western governments will be bitterly attacked because they may seem to be acting counter to political morality.

As one who has been in domestic and international politics for many years, I know that while justice can never be divorced from the means of achieving it, sometimes we have to accept a settlement based on very rough justice, as the lesser of evils.

That is the only valid reason why we have today two Germanies, two Koreas, two Vietnams; and, indeed, for accepting the temporary destruction of some national freedoms and some very old and civilized societies.

Another cause of tension between the two blocs is economic insecurity, and this also is changing for the better.

Economically, the Russian people have reason to look forward to the future with far more confidence than some years ago. Their consumer tensions, if I may call them that, have been reduced.

There is even the beginning of a perception of common economic interests between them and the West.

International trade—and increasing economic contact—doesn't necessarily mean international harmony, but it is an evidence of interdependent interest between the countries trading.

Furthermore, in all countries we are beginning to realize that our prosperity depends on getting away from the beggar-my-neighbor approach to trade.

Certainly the political domination, which so often accompanied economic exploitation, has retreated to the point that it has almost disappeared. The flag doesn't any longer follow, and most certainly doesn't precede, trade.

National Pride

These are at least hopeful signs. But we would be very foolish to take for granted that this new international awareness in the Soviet Union, this new, if hesitant, move towards some very limited freedom, or at least less rigidity in totalitarianism—this growing sense of material well-being—will automatically subdue any aggressive national and ideological drive.

History doesn't permit us to draw that kind of conclusion. There are too many indications that political and economic growth feeds national pride, and leads to an absolutist and confident mentality.

A nation on the march and on the make, with enormous power at its call, is always dangerous. It always appears as a threat to somebody, especially when it believes it has a world mission.

The Russians are a very gifted race, with qualities of intellectual brilliance and physical endurance that certainly qualify them to be leaders in the world. We may hope that they can find some satisfaction for their national emotions of pride and patriotism in gold medals at the Olympic Games or in setting new records on the moon, and in catching up with the West in computers and Coca-Cola.

If not, and if their intention should be the simple aggressive one of seeking out the first opportunity to destroy the Western world militarily, and plant their flag on all the continents as they plan to plant it on the moon, well, in its savage way this would at least be rational, and we could cope with it, even though everything and everybody might be destroyed in the process.

An Obsession

I believe a greater danger lies in their obsession that we are going to strike them; and that out of this comes the drive to set up rocket bases and do other things that contribute to our sense of insecurity.

This, in its turn, leads our side to establish our bases on the fringes of their territory, which intensifies their sense of insecurity.

So the vicious and fatal circle is formed. We cut through it by stumbling into a war which we never meant to begin in the first place.

Therefore, while we recognize that the Russian fear of a threat from outside its borders may be basically a paranoiac fear, we also ought to understand that from their point of view it is not baseless.

While any bellicose aims they might have are, hopefully, being softened by a better life, somehow we have got to persuade the Russians and their satellites that with common fears we also have common interests; that the greatest of all common interests is the avoidance of war, whether by calculation, or, as is more likely, by accident; war which could destroy us all.

If that seems a policy for Utopia, I'd like to know a better one.

School Changes Just Tinkering?

By FRANK WHITE

(A Letter to Monday Morning, a Magazine for Teachers)

Recently the more perceptive and sophisticated critics of education and society have dissented from prevailing concepts of educational reform.

They have recognized that reforms currently directed at our schools are little more than a form of tinkering which fails to confront the fundamental problems of our age: they treat the symptoms and not the malady.

What are the fundamental problems of our age? The consensus among these critics is that we have failed to provide our children with a worthwhile world in which to grow up.

●

They argue that the very nature of our industrialized, urbanized, specialized, highly technological, rapidly-changing society "tends to destroy man's sense of relatedness, to disintegrate common bonds, to increase apathy, to depersonalize activities and to reduce identity and meaning in the human career."

Moreover, our society has progressively excluded children from the major concerns of human life.

The result has been the creation of a special world of youth isolated from the concerns of the community.

There is a suggestion that isolation serves to make this generation "unteachable."

As one author says: "The unsatisfactory character of children's interests can probably be better accounted for in terms of the isolation. . . than it can in terms of the 'inherent defects of childhood' or of the 'weakened moral fibre of modern youth'."

●

Or, if I may add, in terms of the failure of recent educational innovations.

These reformers reduce the objectives of education to two goals. They want a maximum self-realization of human, individual potentialities, and they want the development of enlightened citizens capable of reconstructing and growing with their society.

The organization of society and education does little to foster realization of these goals.

Herbert Thelen observes that: "the child in school has very little opportunity for contending directly with the environment. Hence he doesn't know that he can challenge the world in direct transaction, and it can challenge him right back."

Instead, educationists have offered the child new approaches to instruction such as team-teaching, non-graded open-plan schools, educational television, independent study programs to foster self-directed discovery learning and an assortment of educational games and gadgets.

The unanimous conclusion is that this tinkering, if not doomed to failure, will enjoy limited success because it "simply avoids the challenge of applying learning to life outside the school," continues to allow the isolation of youth from adults and the school from the community, and "doesn't include students in significant decisions which might fundamentally alter the role of youth in the school or community."

Furthermore, there is evidence that what students learn from playing games is how to play games.

●

Do these critics offer any practical alternative to the present structure of society and education? They do.

But they warn that it would involve a complete reconstruction of the present system which would be agonizing to achieve.

It would require a community effort involving people who were committed, highly educated and activated to initiate change.

Unfortunately, it is extremely unlikely that the required leadership will be forthcoming from those who have an investment in the status quo.

Hence, "the major obstacle to reform is the absence of people to begin serious discussion on premises and ideas."

The reconstruction may not occur in our lifetime. It may never occur.

Perhaps we expect too much from a species that is still in the babyhood of its existence.

●

For the present we must operate in a system that is less than perfect. Compromise is regrettable but unavoidable.

Let us suffer its limitations and resign ourselves to the fact that the successful implementation of any innovation will, to some extent, be limited by the very nature of our social and educational organization.

But we need not throw up our arms in despair. There is much we can and must do.

We owe it to ourselves and, above all, to the children that what we do, we do well.

'Good to See Our MPs Ranging the World'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

LONDON — It was heartening to see the two disciples of aid for Biafra, David MacDonald and Andy Brewin, when they won loud cheers from a gathering in London last Tuesday night. The Canadian MPs are here to further two linked goals, firstly the assessment of British political opinion, especially in the governing Labor Party, on Biafra, and secondly to get firsthand opinion from African delegates at the Commonwealth conference on the various moves for aid and peace.

Fisher

At a distance Brewin and MacDonald seem an odd pair; while they share an earnestness, the old-fashioned, shaggy look of the tweedy New Democrat is so different from the big-eyes, "patent leather kid" of the Stanfield causus. But they are so comfortable with each other that they can contradict each other or argue over minor details or major interpretations with the largesse of spirit only possible to friends.

Met in India

They first met in New Delhi in 1961 at the third assembly of the World Council of Churches. Brewin was an Anglican lay delegate, MacDonald a youth representative of the United Church. There they were both attracted to Ted Johnson, a Canadian Presbyterian who is director of his church's overseas mission. Dr. Johnson is the moving spirit who, through the churches and private donors, raises the funds for the political missionary work the two MPs are doing for Biafra.

The major political force sustaining the Nigerians in arms and in stressing the legitimacy of the federal cause in stamping out the Biafran rebellion is the British government of Harold Wilson. As a rider, more and more Soviet military and technical aid is coming to the federal forces. I'll come back to that because it's beginning to have an effect elsewhere.

Brothers Cold

It's been disappointing to Brewin, the socialist, that his brother socialists in Britain have been so cold to Biafra. Not all of them fortunately. The meeting last Tuesday was called to hear speeches on Nigeria by three elder statesmen of the Labor Party, Lord Fenner Brockway (a long-time MP), the Rt. Hon. Jimmy Griffiths (in his 80s, still an MP) and Philip Noel-Baker, probably the most honored non-ministerial MP in the Labor Party.

Lord Brockway and Mr. Griffiths are just back from weeks in both federal Nigerian and Biafra. Brockway didn't want the Canadians to speak at the meeting. He is hewing a neutral line which stresses the need for British leadership in ending the civil war by negotiation. He was afraid they were too pro-Biafran. Of course, they probably are. But that is what the gathering, largely left-wing, wanted to hear. It's a long time since Canadian MPs impressed an English crowd.

Long Conversation

The Canadian MPs learned that the elder trio had long conversations just before the conference opened with Prime Minister Wilson and they think they convinced him it was time to move for negotiations, that the Biafrans were not going to collapse in the foreseeable future. Therefore, the expected success of British policy through federal victory was impossible. Biafra would be more embarrassing as the months drag on, much as Rhodesia has festered because economic sanctions have been ineffective.

I have only speculation in the British press, and talk among African correspondents hanging around the edges of the conference to indicate that the beginning of serious negotiations is likely to come out of the conference. On this Messrs. Brewin and MacDonald hope Pierre Trudeau moves in to use Canadian good offices. Both agree that when they returned from Biafra in October they found Mr. Trudeau a better listener and more open to persuasion than our Foreign Minister, Mitchell Sharp. The latter, they say, is an able parrot for the mandarin line developed in external affairs and so identical to the British. Indeed, the two MPs feel that our PM's personal block to Canadian initiative is the Quebec analogy: He's a federalist and in Nigeria a federal regime is trying to hold a country together and defeat separatists.

Met Kennedy

This good news of London for Biafra in both conference and in party influence on Harold Wilson is supplemented by word Brewin and MacDonald have from Washington. They flew there for a Saturday meeting with a group of influential Democrats who are organizing a large-scale aid and intelligence campaign for Biafra. One of these Americans is Senator Ted Kennedy; another is Al Lowenstein, the colorful new Congressman who led the "Dump Johnson" campaign within the Democratic Party.

Kennedy is one of the few leading U.S. politicians who has expressed sympathy for Biafra. The timeliness of the Kennedy-Lowenstein move is heightened by a swing in State Department thinking about Biafra. Russia is getting into Nigeria in a big way and even Prime Minister Kaunda of Zambia, one of Biafra's few declared friends, has hinted that the Biafrans and he as their supporter may have to look to China for help.

Brewin and MacDonald think that the change in State Department thinking has been shown in the decision of the U.S. to put aircraft at the disposal of the church organizations to get relief into Biafra. This was the course they urged on Mr. Trudeau. Instead he settled for the Hercules planes and RCAF crews which failed out on the Biafra run, really, say the two Canadian MPs, because of their official label. Something which would have been circumvented if the planes had been leased or sold temporarily to the church organizations.

Cool at First

It was heartening, at least to me, to hear from Brewin and MacDonald that only two groups of people seemed to think they were nervy and didn't know their place in world-travelling and lobbying for Biafra. These were the officials of the External Affairs Department and the backbenchers of the Liberal caucus. Their party colleagues had encouraged them (although MacDonald says some Tory MPs were cool at first to all this association with a New Democrat) and except for one daily, the Regina Leader-Post, editorial opinion was favorable.

Take up Causes

Of course, this is what more Canadian MPs should be doing, ranging the world, taking up causes they believe in and using their platforms as MPs. It's grand to see these two engaged, particularly here in London. That's much more than one can say for Canada at the Commonwealth Conference . . . so far.

He Blasted Ice Jam Of Frozen Oratory

The Nation

If a prize were to be awarded for international diplomatic candor (which is not a bad idea), the first truly worthy recipient since the late Cordell Hull would be Emilio Arenales of Guatemala, last year's President of the UN General Assembly.

Recently recovered from prolonged but obviously successful brain surgery, Senor Arenales closed the twenty-third session of the Assembly with words seldom matched in bluntness since the founding of the organization. Speaking of the "unrealistic and emotional approach" of the delegates, he said: ". . . we who come to the United Nations year after year fall victim to these illusions. . . ." He then proceeded to chastise his fellow delegates for substituting speeches and resolutions for "good faith and greater political will to solve problems directly," and concluded his onslaught with these words: "While member states . . . are not ready to shoulder this obligation and responsibility and to transform thought into action, the United Nations will remain a mythical entity in which only those of us who work here believe."

This kind of talk recalls Lord Tennyson's "The nations do but murmur, snarling at each other's heels." Whatever his source of inspiration, Senor Arenales refreshingly called the shots on the UN's performance.

The Parliament of Man seems lately to have engaged itself almost exclusively in gamesmanship, scoring minuscule points and spinning endless webs of words whose effect has been to inhibit, almost to prohibit, effective action on the problems at hand. President Arenales' words of justified exasperation exploded like dynamite upon an ice jam of frozen oratory.

It remains to be seen whether their effect will survive the current recess, but to Senor Arenales, a hearty "Viva!" for a good try.

The Sexual Revolution: Just a False Alarm?

By RUSSELL BAKER
New York Times

A spoilsport by the name of Arno Karlen writes in the Saturday Evening Post that the celebrated sexual revolution is mostly hot air—or more appropriately perhaps, hot print. American carnal customs have not altered appreciably, Karlen contends, since the 1920s, a time of significant change.

Baker

●

Karlen's argument is persuasively buttressed with data. (Sex may still be in the doldrums but data about it are booming. It seems like just the other day that a person felt himself lucky to obtain a single sex datum he could rely on.)

In any case, it is hard to argue with Karlen's data showing that the sexual revolution is mostly myth. Those of us who have adjusted to the myth, however, will find his debunking hard to take.

It was not easy to make that adjustment. For several years we read and heard about the sexual revolution. The most outrageous changes were going on in social customs, we were told.

The first reaction, of course, was skepticism. It is natural for a man, or a woman for that matter, upon hearing that a sexual revolution is in full bloom, to go looking for it.

This is the rubberneck urge in every human. If there is a fire or accident on the next corner, he wants to look at it. If there is a sexual revolution in the country, he wants to see for himself.

●

After a time he began to feel misled. "Nothing outrageous ever happens to me," he said. "The sexual revolution is a false alarm." Those of us to whom nothing outrageous ever happened were not to find peace so easily, however.

Our testimony was blithely set aside as editors, heeding the mass market's hunger for more news about the sexual revolution, poured it on.

As the reports became hotter and hotter, it became socially awkward to say, "Baloney! Nothing outrageous ever happens to me."

People who said that found they were looked upon as hopelessly out of things, the sort of lepers who might turn up at parties wearing shoulder padding in double-breasted suits.

●

The power of publicity is a mighty thing. When all about you society is said to be one vast and evil fleshpot, and all that ever happens to you in the way of unusual sensuosity is an occasional warm bubble bath, brooding depression is likely to set in.

This led inevitably to facing some pretty terrible truths. As for example, "The reason nothing outrageous ever happens to me is that I am too old, too square, too passe ever to be anything at a bacchanalia but a wet blanket."

Something good went out of life after that. It no longer mattered so much if you went out to dinner and dropped gravy on your necktie. The cologne bottle stood for days unopened.

Henry Miller was still read occasionally, but now only for technical information as one might read a trade journal.

This was the road to premature senility. Staying young requires a willingness to accept change without bitterness, and so those of us who decided that life could still be made worth living with an occasional bubble bath, jutted our jaws and accepted the sexual revolution. We might be excluded from it, but we would never chart our course against the future.

After adapting, we even became rather fond of the sexual revolution, or what little we could glean about it from seats high up in the end zone. The letters to Playboy were always good for a laugh from an old has-been.

And the girls in the fashion magazines with their see-through dresses—well, you never saw girls dressed like that even at the fancier expense-account restaurants you went to, but you liked knowing that somewhere at a party there were undoubtedly girls wearing them.

The new literature was even comforting. Reading about the behavior of characters liberated by the sexual revolution made you grateful that your own heyday had passed before it began. What brutal demands of zeal and stamina!

●

And now Karlen has demolished it all. All that is happening is exactly what we all suspected five years ago, namely the same thing that has been happening since dad first learned to make gin in a bathtub.

It cost a lot of us our youth learning to accept the sexual revolution. It is no comfort at all to know now that we were duped out of it. Oh well, the joy of youth is mostly myth, too.

He will take up his Vancouver-based appointment Feb. 1, after serving as manager of CN's Edmonton area for the past three years.

Copper Raised

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. has raised the domestic price of its copper to 48½ cents a pound from 45 cents immediately.

Prices of its copper sold in Europe will continue to be set by quotations on the London Metal Exchange, it said.

Inco's action follows similar increases by Noranda Sales Corp., selling arm of Noranda Mines Ltd., and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd.

Ranger Oil Ltd.

Ranger Oil (Canada) Ltd. of Calgary has acquired an additional mineral permit in the Wollaston Lake area of northeastern Saskatchewan, in the vicinity of what could be a significant uranium find.

The permit was the fourth acquired by Ranger and raised its holdings in the area 250 miles northeast of Saskatoon to 768,000 acres.

At least 10 companies have acquired holdings in the area since Gulf Minerals Ltd. said last month a test well had indicated commercial uranium oxide ore.

Prime Potash Corp.

Prime Potash Corp. of Canada said it had acquired 100 per cent ownership of a 55,000-acre potash permit in central Saskatchewan from Bison Petroleum and Minerals, a subsidiary of Canadian Javelin Ltd.

The move follows a Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench judgment last month awarding Prime Potash a 60 per cent interest in the permit and $299,400 in damages and legal costs.

Deposits were $500.5 million up 10 per cent from the $445.39 million of 1967.

Assets under administration rose 13.5 per cent during the year, to $884.9 million from $779 million.

Hollinger Pays More

Hollinger Mines Ltd. has raised its dividend rate from 30 cents quarterly to 35 cents quarterly, to establish an annual rate of $1.40 per share.

The last increase, from 25 cents to 30 cents per quarter, was instituted in 1967.

A. L. Fairley, Jr., Hollinger president, said the new rate would be effective with the first quarterly payment in 1969.

He said dividend for Hollinger's chief subsidiary, Labrador Mining and Exploration Co. Ltd., would remain at $1.60 per share paid on a quarterly basis of 40 cents per share.

Alcan Joins Price Boost; Record Sales

MONTREAL (UPI) — Alcan Aluminum Corp., the U.S. operating subsidiary of Alcan Aluminium Ltd. of Canada, Monday night joined other major American aluminum companies in hiking prices on rolled mill products and aluminum ingots.

The company said rolled mill product prices would be raised about 5 per cent to reflect higher costs. Alcan Sales Inc., which handles ingot sales in the U.S. for Alcan, said primary ingot prices would be increased from 26 to 27 cents per pound effective Jan. 17.

The announcement came only hours after the parent company reported it was entering 1969 with the heaviest order book and the highest level of operations in its history.

The company said in a statement of preliminary 1968 results it had achieved "new record levels in shipments, dollar sales and gross profit" in 1968.

"Shipments to customers were over 1.2 million tons of aluminum in all forms," as compared with 1.1 million tons in 1967, "sales and revenues were over $1 billion," and gross profits were estimated at $265 million.

The statement added that net income per share for 1967 was estimated at $2.10, "Alcan's second highest level of profits" after 1966.

Factory-Built House Boom

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian companies could be exporting nearly $200 million worth of factory-made housing annually to the northern United States within five years, a department of trade and commerce official said Monday.

E. J. White, head of the housing and construction section in the department's forest product division, said that 57 per cent of the U.S. population is close to Canadian plants.

He told the annual meeting of the Canadian Home Manufacturers' Association that the U.S. tariff on Canadian housing components, now 13 per cent, will drop to 8 per cent by 1972.

Mr. White said fully manufactured houses or components could be shipped to builders, distributors or governments. Another possibility in the export market would be to ship pre-cut material to assemblers.

The meeting heard discussion of the first statistical survey of the industry which showed total sales for 1967 at about $100 million. But a department official said that not every manufacturer responded to the questionnaire and the figure is closer to $200 million.

Mortgage Plan Reinstituted

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Trust Co., Niagara Mortgage and Loan Co. Ltd. and Niagara Realty Ltd. Monday announced the reactivation of their high-ratio combined mortgage plan.

The plan, designed to help improve Canada's housing situation, was first introduced by Royal Trust and Niagara in 1964, but the prevailing money conditions at that time caused a halt in a program a year or so later.

Under the program, loans of up to 87½ per cent of the value of the houses will be available, with the first mortgage portion comprising 75 per cent of the value.

Through a single transaction, persons borrowing funds for homes will be able to obtain the 75 per cent from Royal Trust and the remaining 12½ per cent from Niagara, eliminating the need to seek a second mortgage elsewhere.

Interest rate for the combined mortgage will be one-quarter of 1 per cent above the prevailing prime rate for conventional first mortgages.

Terms will be five years, with 20 or 25 years' amortization, depending upon the age of the property. The borrower will also pay the traditional 2 per cent fee for the mortgage, together with a valuation fee and legal costs.

Under the plan, the additional one-quarter of 1 per cent will cost the holder of a $20,000 mortgage, on a 25-year- amortization basis, $2.35 a month.

Banks Raise Rate To Match U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — The three major Toronto-based chartered banks today raised their minimum interest rates to seven per cent from 6¾ per cent, effective Monday, Jan. 20.

The increase was announced first by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. Its brief statement, blaming generally higher interest rates throughout the Canadian economy, was followed quickly by similar announcements from the Toronto-Dominion Bank and the Bank of Nova Scotia.

The Bank of Nova Scotia noted that the Bank of Canada's bank rate, and interest rates in the United States and money markets generally have been climbing with no indication of a drop off.

This made an increase in its prime lending rate—the interest chartered banks charge to their best customers—inevitable, the Bank of Nova Scotia said.

WIDELY PREDICTED

An increase in interest rates charged by chartered banks had been widely predicted since the Bank of Canada raised its bank rate to 6½ per cent from six per cent Dec. 18.

The bank rate is regarded basically as an indicator of how the central bank wants interest rates to move in the country.

At the time of the increase—which came after three consecutive cutbacks reducing the rate from its record of 7½ per cent early in 1968—the Bank of Canada said the move reflected concern over persistent inflationary price and cost increases in Canada and other countries.

The increase also follows the trend in the United States, where major banks raised their prime lending rates to 6½ per cent from 6¼ per cent in early December and then to seven per cent Jan. 7.

Other interest rates in Canada have been heading higher steadily in recent weeks.

At the first of the year, the regular quarterly review of the National Housing Act mortgage rate pushed it to a record 9⅛ per cent from 8¾.

Several major mortgage lenders, however, have been letting money out at slightly under the NHA rate.

The increasing rates obviously will mean a further rise in many prices and costs, as the effects of more expensive money percolate through the Canadian economy.

TAPE LOOP MONITORING

COULD SAVE MORE HUMAN LIVES

Yes, we're saving more heart cases since electronic monitoring was installed in our two hospitals last year, thanks to your generosity and government help . . . but . . . we need more equipment to save more lives.

Newly developed transmitting devices can now be attached to patients allowing them to move freely while at the same time their heart rhythms are transmitted to a central control panel. The first alteration in rhythm will set off an alarm so the patient receives immediate attention.

WILL SHE GET TO THE RACES?

One of two girls granted conditional jockey licences by Florida Racing Commission, Barbara Jo Rubin leads horse to post at Tropical Park in Miami. Barbara, 19, earned permission to ride in races Monday when she passed riding test. Now she must wait to learn if male jockeys will refuse to ride against her. Another girl, Irish Coppinger, arrived too late to take riding test.

Joe Admired... ...And Absent

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Joe Namath, the toast of pro football, is the most wanted man on coach Wally Lemm's list.

VERA LYSNE
. . . sizzling series

Lemm had to run his American Football League East All-Stars through their first practice without a quarterback Monday.

Namath was apparently still celebrating his New York Jets' 16-7 victory over Baltimore Colts in the Super Bowl.

Lemm, who coaches Houston Oilers, is happy to have Namath on his side.

"Wasn't he fantastic?" Lemm said of Namath's performance against the Colts.

Coach Hank Stram of Kansas City, who had his AFL West All-Stars together for their opening practice, also talked of Namath and the Jets' upset which took the AFL out of second class status.

MOVES BACK QUICKLY

"What makes Namath different from most pro quarterbacks is his speed of retreat into the pocket before passing," Stram said. "Most pro passers go back nine yards. Namath goes 12. That's a heck of a difference."

Stram faces the problem of rushing Namath, a job that proved too much for AFL West All-Stars last year—the first time the All-Star game was played in the Gator Bowl here. Namath engineered a 25-24 East victory, throwing two touchdown passes and plunging one yard for the winning score in the last minute.

Namath feels the need for a fourth operation on his left knee to mend an inflamed tendon in the joint. Jets physician Dr. James A. Nichols feels an operation could be hazardous. He believes rest will take care of the knee, and he will take another look at it before making final decision on the requested surgery.

City Bowlers Take Awards At Vancouver

VANCOUVER — Victoria's Stan Jones and Vera Lysne captured top prizes in the Master Fivepin Bowlers' Association Tournament Sunday at Commodore Lanes.

Jones won the men's division and first prize of $180 with a 1,784 score compiled in the six game competition.

Wally Weinberger, also of Victoria, placed second with 1,725 and took home $110.

Mrs. Lysne topped most of the men competitors with her 1,716 total which brought $100 prize money and top spot in the distaff competition.

Defending champion Dot Annis of Vancouver was second with 1,674 and bowled the high women's single of 395. May Wallis of Victoria finished fifth with 1,571.

Tied by Thistles

KENORA, Ont. (CP—Japan's touring hockey team jumped into an early lead but wound up in a 5-5 tie in an exhibition game Sunday with Kenora Thistles.

Japan led 2-1 at the end of the first period and the clubs were deadlocked at 3-3 entering the final period before 1,700 fans.

Barbara Passes Test, But Just Like Woman, Irish Arrives Late

MIAMI (AP) — Barbara Jo Rubin, a 19-year-old Miami girl, qualified for her jockey's licence Monday and will ride in her first race against male jockeys later in the week.

The three Tropical Park stewards endorsed Barbara Jo after watching her break a horse from the starting gate. Her contract employer, trainer Bryan Webb, said he would put her up on one of his horses one day this week.

Following standard procedure, she will not actually receive a licence until she had ridden in a race.

"We were very impressed," said Eb Pons, a steward. "It looked to me like she can ride as good as anybody. She broke the horse very well and even used the whip effectively, which we do not require of male jockeys taking the test. There is no doubt in my mind that we will be able to issue her a licence as soon as she's ridden one time.

★ ★ ★

The stewards also checked the patrol film as Miss Rubin broke Webb's Jamie C. from the gate between two stablemates. Jamie C. is a filly which never has started. Miss Rubin put her mount in the lead and outran her male competitors for one-half mile.

A second girl, Irish Coppinger, also 19, arrived at the starting gate too late. She said she would be back Wednesday to seek the stewards' approval.

The main point of concern is whether male riders will compete against the girls. The jockeys at Churchill Downs refused to ride against Penny Ann Early last fall after she was granted a licence.

Hodge Skips Rink To Challenge Win

DUNCAN — Harvey Hodge of the host Duncan Curling Club guided his rink to top honors in the 17th annual men's bonspiel Sunday despite losing out in the primary event.

Nanaimo's Glen Phillips, forced to follow around a guard with his last rock, defeated Hodge in an extra end during the final of the primary Wright Jewellers event.

Hodge sprang back with a victory in the Grand Challenge event, open only to the 16 rinks reaching the fours of the four regular events, by downing clubmate Mel Smith in the final.

Phillips was eliminated from this competition before the semi-finals were reached.

Other event winners were the Victoria Curling Club rink of Bill McLean, and Duncan club rinks of Harry Dewar and Glen Harper.

SAY CANADIAN TERMS . . . / . . . WERE UNSATISFACTORY

Russians Cancel Tour

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet national hockey team has cancelled an exhibition tour of Canada that was scheduled to start in Montreal this Friday, the Soviet Hockey Federation said today.

The Soviet team, which was to have left for the eight-city tour Monday, decided that terms offered by the Canadians were unsatisfactory.

The sources added that the Soviets also considered the fact that the Canadian national team, which the Soviets wanted to play, was out of the country, participating in a tournament in Colorado.

In Toronto, a spokesman for Maple Leaf Gardens, where the Russians were to play the Canadian national team Sunday, said the cancellation would mean a loss of about $5,000.

"We were anticipating a sell-out," the spokesman said. He said the 16,485 seats had been scaled down from $5.50—$1 less than the price for National Hockey League games.

The spokesman said that the Russian statement concerning the Canadian national team being in Colorado was incorrect.

"This was to be the strongest national team assembled this year," he said. "It was a combination of the Ottawa team and the Winnipeg team."

The schedule for the Russian tour called for the Soviets to play the Canadian national team Friday in Montreal and Sunday in Toronto before playing in Vancouver Jan. 21, Victoria Jan. 22, Ottawa Jan. 24, Winnipeg Jan. 26 and 28 and Ottawa again Jan. 30.

The spokesman said the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association would have to apply pressure to have the Russians honor the commitment.

"I wouldn't be surprised if the Russians were banned from world hockey competition for this," he said.

BEST SEATS SOLD

In Ottawa, a spokesman for the Eastern Nationals said all centre seats had been sold for the Jan. 24 game and that Canada had been depending on this series to get its national club ready for international competition.

The world hockey championship is in Stockholm March 15-30.

He said he believes the Russians may be trying to improve terms of the tour, that in the past they have bargained right up to ice time.

He said the Russians would be playing a composite of east and west sections of the national team in several games and would play either the east or the west team in the others. He said that unless the Winnipeg national team is playing a game in Colorado, he knew of no tournament out of the country to conflict with the Russian tour dates.

COMPLETE SURPRISE

In Montreal, where the Soviet team was to have started its tour Friday with a game against a combined east-west Canadian national team, news of the cancellation came as a complete surprise.

"We're still waiting for official word from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which booked the game," said Howard Hamilton, a spokesman for the 16,500-seat Forum.

Hamilton, vice-president and general manager of the Canadian Arena Co. which owns the Forum, said tickets for the Friday game went on sale during the weekend and "a couple of thousand" had been sold before the cancellation was announced.

NO OFFICIAL WORD

The Russians were also scheduled to face the Canadian Nationals in Victoria on Jan. 22 and only about 500 seats for the game at Memorial Arena remained unsold this morning.

News of the reported cancellation was a complete surprise to Memorial Arena manager John Bate.

"We have not yet received any official word and are going ahead with plans and ticket sales," Bate commented. "As far as we are concerned, the game is still on."

Phil Esposito Joins Charge at Records

MONTREAL (CP)—National Hockey League records are in jeopardy as Bobby Hull, Phil Esposito and Gordie Howe continue to set a scorching pace in the individual scoring race.

If the top three continue the pace they have maintained so far this season, all three could reach or go over the 100-mark for the first time in NHL history.

Hull, Chicago Black Hawks' golden jet who has held the scoring lead since Nov. 6, shares the record for most points in one season—97—with team-mate Stan Mikita.

Statistics released by the NHL today show Hull has 60 points, including a league-leading 30 goals. Esposito's 59 points—18 of them gained in Boston Bruins' last seven games—are four better than the total for Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Hull and Esposito have played in 39 games this year while Howe has appeared in 41. Each NHL team will play a total of 76 games in the current schedule.

GOALIES SPARKLE

Bobby Orr of Boston, currently 17th in the scoring race with 38 points on 12 goals and 26 assists, could produce records for most goals, assists and points by a defenceman in one season.

Meanwhile, the netminding of Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall of St. Louis Blues of the Western Division is moving at a pace which could produce the most shutouts and the lowest goals-against average by a team in more than 10 years.

The two veterans now share the lead in shutouts with five each, their total of 10 equalling the high by Montreal Canadiens last season.

Award winners at the midway point of the season were Plante and Hall in the goaltending race and they shared $500. Hull picked up $500 as the midway scoring leader and Esposito earned $250 as runner-up to Hull.

NANAIMO HOCKEY CLUB SUSPENDED AFTER ROW

Ivan Temple, secretary-treasurer and registrar of the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association, has announced suspension of Nanaimo Buccaneers of the Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

The move came following a fracas which took place Sunday in the Fuller Lake Arena near Chemainus during an exhibition game against Kerrisdale Centennials of the West Coast Junior "B" League.

Details of the brawl were not made clear but reports indicate that two Kerrisdale players were hospitalized, one with a broken nose and the other with a possible broken jaw.

Temple stated that a committee would be appointed to investigate the matter and that BCAHA officials will make a final decision as to penalties as soon as the committee report is received.

Meanwhile, all players and officials of the Nanaimo club are under suspension.

Test With Soviets Won't Be Sudden

TORONTO (CP) — President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Monday that if a NHL team ever plays the Russians, it won't be in a sudden-death game.

"It will probably be a four out of seven or something like that," Campbell said in an interview.

Campbell, however, did not suggest that a series of games against the Russians is imminent.

The NHL president said most demands for a game have come from Russian coaches as a propaganda device. The sports commissar, who would have to approve any game, has been silent.

Campbell said it would be to the advantage of the Russians to play an NHL team. The Russians have progressed as far as they can with their regimented brand of hockey and need to play an NHL team to acquire other skills, he said.

Campbell said he wouldn't be surprised if the Russians are in superior physical condition.

"We could adopt some of their training methods, like playing soccer in the sand for instance. I can't think of a better way to get players in shape."

The NHL president was here to attend the funeral of Bobby Hewitson, former curator of the Sports Hall of Fame.

Tiger Ace Expecting Season to Be Tough

NEW YORK — Denny McLain, 31-game winner last season for Detroit Tigers, sees a tough season ahead for pitchers because pitching mounds are being reduced to 10 inches in height from 15.

"Reducing the height of the mound will put an added strain on some pitchers," says McLain, the first hurler to win more than 30 major league games in 37 years.

"I don't think pitchers will be able to pitch 250 to 300 innings like a lot of us did last season."

McLain worked 336 innings last year. Six others in the American League went 250 innings or more. In the National League, 14 hurlers worked 250 or more innings.

"Some pitchers will come up with sore arms because the five inches on the mounds has got to hurt them," McLain added. "We will be losing five inches of momentum and that's a big difference."

CONTROL HELPS

McLain said he didn't think the smaller strike zone would bother pitchers with good control.

"Right now I have a little shoulder trouble" added the 24-year-old hurler who won 17 games in 1967 and 20 in 1966 when some mounds were lower than 15 inches.

"It's a muscle stretched out of proportion but I haven't thrown a baseball since winning the sixth game of the World Series.

"A lot of pitchers who work many innings pitch with pain. A few pills—I take all kinds—and it's all gone.

"I won't work out until spring training. I never work indoors."

HAS SIGNED CONTRACT

McLain is one of the few major leaguers to have signed a 1969 contract. He signed one week after the series and said he "got what I wanted." He reportedly is getting around $75,000.

Most major leaguers say they will not sign their new contracts until baseball comes up with improvements in their pension plan. Some have threatened to pass up spring training.

"If the Players' Association goes on strike I'll stay out with them," said McLain.

Eastern Nats Trip Germans

BERLIN (CP) — Canada's Eastern National hockey team scored its second win in two days Monday night, defeating East Germany, 7-4, before a sell-out crowd of 4,500 in East Berlin.

Richie Bayes, Derek Holmes and Tom Martin each scored two goals for the Canadians. Jim Adair got the other tally. The team beat East Germany 3-0 Sunday night in West Berlin.

Bill Saunders Again on Top Of Scoresheet

SEATTLE (AP)—Bill Saunders of the Portland Buckaroos is again atop the Western Hockey League scoring race in which the top five scorers are separated by only five points.

Saunders, with 26 goals and 29 assists, has a two-point edge on Seattle Totems' Guyle Fielder, 12-41—53.

San Diego's Willie O'Ree and injured Warren Hynes each has 51, and Art Jones of Portland has 50.

Jones moved up into leadership contention with a 10-point spree during last week's schedule.

NEW FOOTBALL CHAMPS . . . / . . . REMAIN IN ORBIT

Eight Jets on All-Star Squad

MIAMI — The New York Jets were still in orbit Monday as they departed the scene of their stunning 16-7 upset victory over Baltimore in the Super Bowl which won them professional football's world title.

The game erased any doubts that the American Football League had come of age. It came after the Green Bay Packers of the National League had trimmed AFL teams in the first two Super Bowl games.

For eight of the champions there will be another game next Sunday in Jacksonville, Fla.—the American Football League's All-Star game.

Jets picked to play in this game are quarterback Joe Namath who steered the AFL champions to victory Sunday with what coach Webb Ewbank called a perfect game; George Sauer, who caught eight of Namath's 17 completed aerials; Don Maynard, a decoy most of the game; Gerry Philbin and Verlin Biggs, two members of the star front line defensive corps; Dave Herman and Winston Hill, largely responsible for opening up the holes that permitted fullback Matt Snell to gain 121 yards in 31 carries; and Jim Turner, whose three field goals accounted for nine points.

Snell didn't receive a single vote for the All-Star squad. And the 220-pound Ohio State graduate was not abashed at letting one and all know about it.

"You guys spent all week telling us how great they are—Tom Matte and Jerry Hill," said Snell in the dressing room after the game. "Now go talk to them." Matte picked up 116 yards in 11 carries, 58 of them with one run. Hill gained 29 in nine attempts.

HEAD PRO AT CITY GOLF CLUB

Davies Gets Gorge Position

Earl Davies has been selected by the Gorge Vale Golf Club to succeed Joe Pryke in the capacity of club professional.

Pryke resigned the post a few weeks ago.

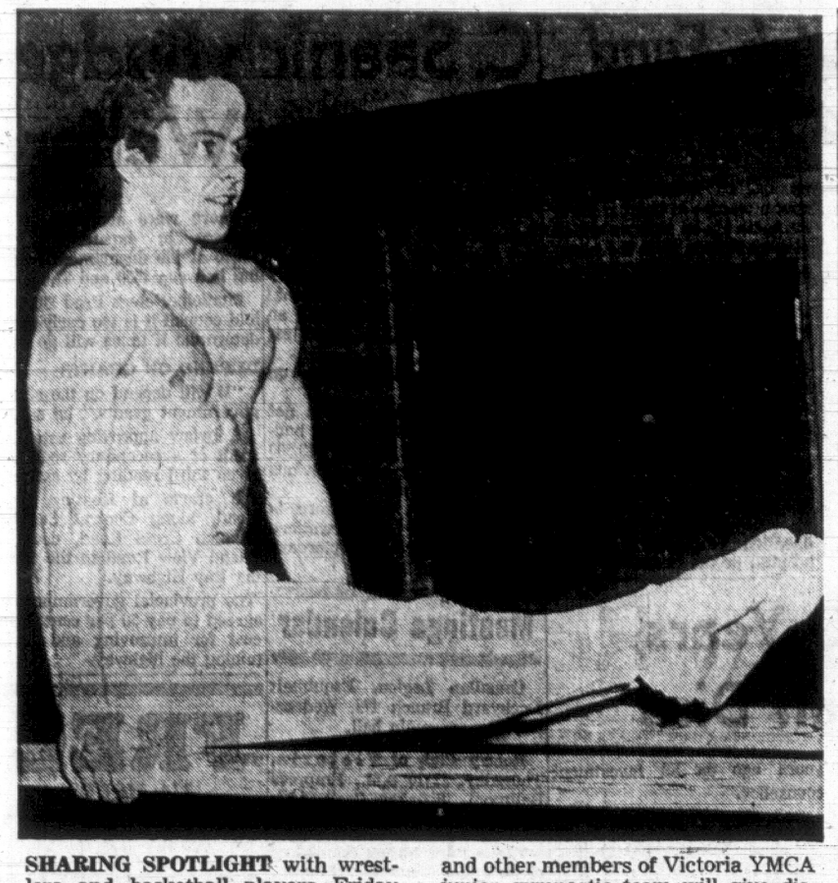

A well-known figure on Victoria courses, Davies will take up his new position on Feb. 1.

Since last July, Davies has been chief assistant to Dick Munn at Vancouver's Point Grey Golf Club and before that was assistant with Bill Court at the Royal Colwood course.

Davies is a native of Duncan and learned his golfing groundwork in that city and then served a stint in the navy prior to working at Colwood.

Strong recommendations from Court and Munn backed Davies' application to Gorge Vale. They spoke highly of his qualities and ability to handle a head professional's position.

He was one of 24 applicants for the post.

SHARING SPOTLIGHT with wrestlers and basketball players Friday night at Oak Bay Senior High School will be muscular Rick Johnson, Canadian junior gymnastic champion. Oak Bay boys' basketball team, undefeated this season, will open the "sportsfest" at 7 in a game against Templeton, of Vancouver; Johnson and other members of Victoria YMCA junior gymnastic team will give display at 8:15, and touring Japanese all-star schoolboy wrestling team will commence series of eight matches against Vancouver Island all-stars at 8:45. Tickets ($1) may be obtained in advance from Bud Bell's Men's Wear and Humber Brothers.

GUIDED CLUB . . . . . FOR 22 YEARS

Sir Matt to Retire

MANCHESTER (Reuters) — Sir Matt Busby, 59, who rebuilt Manchester United after a disastrous 1958 plane crash, announced today he is quitting at the end of the season as coach of the soccer team he masterminded for 23 years.

Busby's resignation has been accepted "with great reluctance," a spokesman said at a news conference here, but Busby will stay on as general manager of the team.

Busby, longest-serving British soccer coach, took over Manchester United in 1945 and watched its rise to top team in English soccer, winning the league title five times and the Football Association Cup twice.

His team was heralded as the Busby Babes and the young players were hitting peak form when the team plane crashed at Munich airport in 1958, killing several players and critically injuring a number of others, including Busby himself.

Busby recovered to build another great team—culminating in May, 1968, when United became the first English team to win the prized European Cup by beating Benfica of Portugal 4-1 in the final at Wembley Stadium in London.

Busby was knighted in June, 1968, for his efforts in the name of soccer.

A team spokesman said the coaching job will be advertised "at a later date."

Habs Hope Ken'll Drop Law Books for Hockey

ITHACA, N.Y. — If Montreal Canadiens want Ken Dryden of Toronto, they might take a leaf from the book of Ned Harkness.

Harkness, Cornell University hockey coach, brought in reserve recruiter Clinton Rossiter, also known as an author and professor of government, to persuade Dryden to forego his plans to attend Princeton and come to Cornell.

"It was different than the usual method of recruitment," the tall, blond Dryden said Recently. "I never even saw a hockey game at Cornell."

The arrangement has pleased all parties. Dryden, now a 21-year-old senior, took a course from Rossiter, before he decided to major in history, not government, and got a B grade. He has maintained a B average in all his courses for three years.

PRAISED BY COACH

Harkness, coach of two national championship teams, says Dryden is "the finest goalie I have ever coached."

"There is no goalie in the college or amateur ranks that is better."

Dryden has applied to attend law school at Yale, Harvard, Toronto and McGill.

If the Canadiens have their way, however, he will sign this spring with the National Hockey League team and join his brother, Dave, goalie with Chicago Black Hawks, as a pro.

Few experts doubt that the six-foot-three, 210-pound Dryden, known as the monster in Eastern schools, has the potential of becoming a professional.

"I simply cannot remember a better college hockey goalie," says Harvard coach Ralph Weiland.

In nearly three years, Dryden has won 59 games, lost three and tied one. He has allowed just 1.57 goals per game.

Experts are awed at the speed and agility with which Dryden can cover corners and block low shots.

Dryden now must choose between law school and Montreal.

YALE FIRST CHOICE

Yale, he says, is his first choice for law. But if he ends up at McGill or Toronto, NHL scouts who want him to turn professional can relax just a bit.

"In Canada, as long as you are registered in the school, you can play for it," he explained. "I guess that if I wanted to get my law degree and then play pro, that's what I would do."

When he is graduated in the spring, Dryden will do his bargaining with the Canadiens, who purchased his negotiating rights for $2,000 from Dryden's junior B team in Toronto. Dryden got none of the money.

Ron Caron, chief scout of the Canadiens, feels Dryden will accept a pro contract and "in a few years time, he could make it."

Pixie From Pickering Candidate for Stardom

By The Canadian Press

To the names of Harry Jerome and Elaine Tanner add Beverly Boys, a young athlete heading for stardom and heartbreak.

The buildup has begun already. Her coach, Don Webb, of Toronto, said of her prospects "We can win two golds in Scotland," site of the 1970 Commonwealth Games.

And she has the credentials to justify his confidence.

The pixie from Pickering, Ont., was only 15 when she competed at the British Empire Games in Jamaica in 1966. In the 10-metre tower competiton she had a 15-point lead after preliminary dives.

Other teams protested that wind had affected their dives, and the competiton was begun all over again. Diving in disappointment, she hung in for a third-place bronze medal. She won a silver in the three-metre springboard event.

In 1967 at the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg, diving against the strong United States team which had not been in Jamaica, she was well down until the last dive.

Bev roared off the tower in a tumbling, twisting show-stopper which brought her up to second place and a silver medal.

CAME THROUGH

The story was the same this year at the Olympic Games in Mexico. Now 17, Bev came through on her last dive to end up fourth in the world.

Harry Jerome of Vancouver was hailed as the fastest man in the world, co-holder of world records in the 100-yard and 100-metre dashes. In the 1960 Olympics at Rome he was expected to win at least one gold medal. Instead, he pulled up lame in the semi-finals and was pilloried by some writers as "a quitter."

Elaine Tanner was 17 at the Mexico Olympics with brilliant triumphs in the 1966 British Empire Games and the 1967 Pan-American Games behind her. She was the fastest in Mexico in the 100 and 200-metre backstroke semi-finals. In the finals, the best she could do was second place in each.

FLED FROM WRITERS

After her defeat in the 100 metres, she fled in a near-hysteria of disappointment, unable to face the sports writers. Some writers and broadcasters criticized her "bush league" conduct, and when the year-end poll rolled around she drew the most personal votes of anyone as "disappointment of the year in sport."

Now the same pressure is building up against Bev Boys, who has the determination and the desire to walk right into it.

The determination is illustrated by Bev and her mother scrubbing office floors to raise money for her training.

'WE'LL BE THERE'

The desire rings in her coach's reaction to an invitation for her to swim in Moscow this spring—"We'll be there if we have to walk."

Bev Boys is an open-faced youngster just beginning to show the first stirrings of glamor but still with the frank naivety of the Grade 11 student at Pickering High.

Of the Moscow invitation, she said:

"I'd really like to go. I always expected Russians to be kind of mean, but I met some in Mexico and they were really nice—just like anyone."

Her mischievous charm was evident on her last dive in Mexico. With 12,000 spectators cheering and the highest score of the Games flashing on the scoreboard, she swept out of the pool and ran across the deck to her coach.

To Webb's intense embarrassment, she fell to her knees and kissed his hand.

The question of whether Bev can make it to the top is debatable but academic.

PINPOINT PRECISION

It takes 1.5 seconds to plunge the nearly 33 feet from the high tower to the surface of the pool and when you're doing a 1½ somersault while turning three times, the precision needed is pinpoint.

But there are only three indoor pools with 10-metre towers in Canada—in Winnipeg, Halifax and Montreal, and that's a long way to go to work out. There are more regulation indoor pools in Moscow alone than there are indoors or out in all of Canada.

If she becomes the best in the world, it will be by travelling to Winnipeg, Halifax or Montreal to work out whenever she can afford it.

If she doesn't, she'll be dismissed as just another promising Canadian athlete who didn't quite have it to make the big time.

BEVERLY BOYS
. . . heartbreak ahead

Claremont Girls Down Esquimalt

Lorraine Benn paced Claremont with 14 points, while Wendy Humphrey led Esquimalt with seven.

BOSTON — Olympic champion Willie Davenport of Southern University equalled the indoor record with a dazzling display of speed Saturday night in winning the 45-yard high hurdles at 5.8 in the 443rd Knights of Columbus track meet at Boston Garden.

New Agreement Gives Dalton Time to Build

MONTREAL (CP) — Kay Dalton, head coach of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, has agreed to a new three-year contract.

"Both of us seemed pretty happy," Dalton said Monday following his return from a two-week trip through the United States, during which he met with club owner Joe Atwell.

"Nothing has been signed yet. We shook hands or whatever you want to call it. I think we'll sign it officially next week when Joe gets in town."

The remaining years on Dalton's current three-year contract will be replaced by the new agreement and guarantees Dalton the time he said it would take to build a solid contender.

"All I want is the opportunity to do what I came here to do and I have that chance now. It takes five or six years. I know that sounds like a lot of time to the public but that's how it has to be.

"It's a friendly contract and I won't hold Joe to it if he's unhappy with me. He can tell me to get a new job anytime he wants. But he told me I could coach here as long as I want to. That's fair with me."

The Alouettes finished last in the four-team Eastern Conference in 1968.

Rhodesia Excluded From 1970 Games

GLASGOW (UPI) — The Commonwealth Games Federation has voted to exclude Rhodesia from the 1970 games scheduled for Edinburgh, federation officials said here Monday. Both federation secretary Sandy Duncan and William Carmichael, the organization's director in London, confirmed Rhodesia's exclusion when queried about reports that the decision was being taken. Carmichael also said invitations had already been sent out to the other scheduled participants in the games.

Rhodesia participated in the last Commonwealth Games, at Kingston, Jamaica, in 1966. But it was excluded after an extended struggle from the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico after a number of African, Asian and East bloc nations objected to Salisbury's race policies.

Duncan said the federation had been put under no pressure from the British government to keep Rhodesia out of the 1970 games in conformity with Britain's stand that Premier Ian Smith's Salisbury regime is illegal. He said he had not yet been in contact with either the foreign office or Rhodesia house about the decision to eliminate the Rhodesians from the meet.

Most Teams Plan Return

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Up to 14 teams will take part in the North American Professional Soccer League in the 1969 season, scheduled to start in April.

It seemed until recently there would be no league at all because of large sums of money lost by league clubs last year.

The United States Soccer Football Association, at a meeting in New York, gave its approval to the league plans.

Phil Woosnam, newly-elected executive director of the league, said the exact number ot teams will be known within two weeks.

Officials said that of 17 cities which operated last year, the following 14 were considering fielding teams in 1969—Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Kansas City, New York, Oakland, St. Louis, San Diego, Toronto and Washington.

Sogge Snubs Football For Dodger Contract

LOS ANGELES — Steve Sogge, star quarterback of the Southern California Trojans, has signed a baseball contract with Los Angeles Dodgers and has been assigned to the Spokane Indians of the Pacific Coast League.

A Dodger spokesman said that Sogge, 21, received a bonus but the amount was not disclosed.

Although Sogge has been a quarterback on two Rose Bowl football teams, he also was first-string catcher on the All Pacific-8 baseball team last year.

WORST YEAR

As a hitter, that was his worst year. He hit only .226, off considerably from .361 as a sophomore and .303 as a junior.

Sogge graduates this term holding the USC record for most passes attempted (370) and most yards gained passing (2,542).

His baseball coach, Rod Dedeaux, said of the 5-foot-10, 175-pound catcher: "His catching is just like his quarterbacking. He isn't fantastic in any one category. All he can do is beat you."

HEADLINERS GET SIMPSON

LOS ANGELES (AP) — O. J. Simpson, the University of Southern California's flashy running back and 1968 Heisman Trophy winner, has acquired a business manager.

Simpson says he has signed with Sports Headliners Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind., to handle contract negotiations, investments, taxes, endorsements and personal appearances.

He is expected to be the No. 1 choice in the pro football draft.

World Council Names Rose Boxer-of-Year

MANILA (AP) — Bantamweight champion Lionel Rose of Australia has been voted "fighter of the year" by the World Boxing Council.

The WBC announcement said Rose was chosen over five other candidates. They were Luis Legra of Spain, Sonny Liston and Bob Foster of the United States, Nino Benvenutti of Italy and the Philippines' Pedro Adigue.

Rose won his four fights last year. He grabbed the world title from Fighting Harada of Japan and then successfully defended it against the then No. 1 contender, Takeo Sakurai, also of Japan.

ELFORD ASKS QUALITY IN OAK BAY HOUSING

Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford said Monday she wants new housing in the municipality to maintain the look of quality.

A newly-appointed member of an enlarged advisory planning committee, she said she does not want to see overdevelopment of the limited land available.

And of town house development supported by Mayor Fred Hawes in his inaugural address, January 6, Ald. Elford said she has "yet to see a town house development that would be suitable".

Apartment construction should be of various types and no one type should be overdeveloped in an area, she said.

The remaining land in the municipality should be used for the same quality of building now going up.

Before Magistrate

A man who pleaded guilty last month to stealing $1,050.37 worth of goods was sentenced Monday to a year in prison.

Danny Edward Bradley, 35, of 1022 North Park, was charged with taking a color television set from Simpsons-Sears, 16 chairs from the University of Victoria, and numerous articles from Acme Novelty, 758 Cloverdale.

Magistrate J. A. Byers imposed the sentence "in view of the previous record and the repetitive nature of the occurrences."

Bradley's lawyer, Gerald Lauder, suggested a substantial fine would be more appropriate as the thefts were "apparently impulsive acts."

The offences occured during November and December while the accused worked as a janitor at the university.

He had a previous record for theft in 1965, and in 1954 for dealing with forged documents.

Two brothers charged with obstructing an Esquimalt police officer were remanded to Thursday after one pleaded guilty and the other not guilty.

Glen Lageri, 827 Wollaston, represented by lawyer Cal Becker, pleaded not guilty to obstructing Const. Frank Mitchell. Bail was set at $500.

His brother Ernest had no lawyer and pleaded guilty. No bail was set.

Mr. Becker asked for the remand so he could consider the case.

A man caught half a mile from an accident scene, and unable to walk without assistance, was sentenced to 15 days for drunken driving.

Jaswant Singh, 4086 Raymond, pleaded guilty. He also admitted failing to remain at the accident scene and was fined $100.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Singh was driving east on Dallas Dec. 13 and hit a westbound car after he "failed to negotiate a turn."

He hindered the investigation by police officers, Mr. Birkett told the court and said he would "buy them off" if they would drop the charges.

At the police station he fell off a chair and attempted to knock ashes off a cigarette that hadn't been lit.

Damage to the two cars was $700.

Mr. Birkett said the accused and a previous impaired driving conviction in 1967.

A man who visited his former common-law wife at 2:30 in the morning, ripped her dress down the front and forced her to go for a ride in his car, was fined $50 for common assault.

George Stoddard, 9971 Resthaven, Sidney, was also ordered to post a $250 one-year good behaviour bond.

The complainant testified she was asleep at her sister's house Dec. 13 when Stoddard arrived drunk. When she refused to leave with him, she said he ripped her dress, pushed her into the hall and later out of the door into the car. She suffered no injuries, she said.

After driving along the Patricia Bay Highway for some time he stopped and lay down to sleep when she refused to drive further. Shortly afterward police arrived and took her home.

William H. Pepper, 113 Gorge Road, was remanded in custody until Jan. 20 after pleading guilty to assault causing bodily harm.

Court was told police attended at AJ's night club on Fort Street Dec. 18 after a fight between the accused and another man.

The fight had apparently started when the other man made a remark to the girl with Pepper. The man suffered a cut over his eye requiring five stitches, and a hand cut taking three stitches.

Pepper was "very intoxicated," police said, and a window at the scene was broken.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Pepper had a conviction in 1967 for assault causing bodily harm and common assault.

One of two women who pleaded guilty to shoplifting last week was fined and the other was given a suspended sentence.

Rita Colture, 555 Whiteside was fined $100 and Ivonne Travers, 791 Pandora, was placed on a $250 one-year good behavior bond.

Magistrate J. A. Byers asked the women why they stole goods (in each case valued at less than $50) from the stores and both said they didn't know.

The second woman was told by the magistrate to put herself under a doctor's care and to keep away from stores of that kind. She was charged with taking goods from the Metropolitan Stores 1227 Douglas.

Fined $100 each for failing to remain at the scene of an accident were: Georgina Genochio, 4368 Lochside, Michael Elcock, 4340 Harder. Murray Dunlop, 830 McLure, was fined $200 on the same charge.

Stuart Robertson, 1190 Fort, was fined $300 for inpaired care and control of an automobile.

Victor Petford, 3174 Rutledge, was fined $150 for driving while under a licence suspension and $100 for failing to stop at a red light.

MONTREAL (CP) — Eight employees of a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce were handcuffed one by one Monday before three bandits made off with an estimated $10,000.

Lake May Exclude Skiing Business

Saanich parks committee indicated Monday night that commercial water skiing won't be allowed at Elk-Beaver Lake Park and private water skiing will get close scrutiny.

Aldermen commented to this effect, although the committee tabled several letters until it can consider in detail the Stroyan report on recreational possibilities.

The Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers' Association suggested an anti-noise bylaw before the spring because of noise from boats and added there might be a ban on water skiing. It supported "active sports" such as sailing and rowing.

An earlier letter from A. K. MacLeod, 1436 Elford, who said he wants to start charter water skiing, was tabled, along with a letter from the University of Victoria on rowing club facilities.

Ald. William Noel said private water skiing shouldn't be banned if it can be safely accommodated without too much noise. Careful study is needed.

Ald. William Campbell said he doesn't want to see commercial water skiing and that Mr. MacLeod should be on Haro Strait with a 100-horsepower engine.

Ald. Alan Newberry said water skiing has created havoc at some lakes—he gave Shawnigan as an example—and he liked the ratepayers' association idea of encouraging active sports "rather than weekend roar. A commercial enterprise like this (Mr. MacLeod's) is completely out of the question."

ACCESSES CUT

Committee members pruned a $42,000 program to provide 10 beach accesses to $23,600 for seven accesses—at Fenn Avenue, D'Arcy Lane, Haro Road, Guinevere, Cranford Place, Tudor North and Killarney.

These items will be recommended to council for inclusion in the 1969 budget which will be considered in detail in the spring.

Parks superintendnt Bert Richman said Saanich has 86 accesses but only 13 of them are developed.

Ald. Newberry said the need is clearly urgent for improved beach accesses and "the sooner we get on with the job the better."

The committe also recommended that $10,000 be approved for developing playing fields on 22 acres of the Lambrick Estate in Gordon Head.

Mr. Richman said seeding must be done this spring to enable sports to begin the following spring. He envisaged three winter sports fields and three baseball diamonds.

Sally Ann Rally Planned Here

Victoria Salvation Army will begin an evangelistic crusade in the citadel at 757 Pandora Avenue tonight at 7:45 to continue every night until Sunday.

Guest speaker throughout will be Major James Henry from Atlanta, Georgia, territorial evangelist for the Army since 1962.

Major Henry also plays the guitar and sings many old-time gospel hymns.

Heart-Watch Fund Needs $24,100 More

The newly-started Kiwanis Heart Fund has collected $2,900 for portable coronary care equipment for St. Joseph's and Royal Jubilee hospitals, a Kiwanis member said Monday.

Donations have ranged from $1 to $1,000 towards the club's $27,000 goal by private subscription.

The money will pay for 14 portable units for monitoring heart rhythms of patients well enough to move about their wards but still suspected of having irregular and risky heart action.

The units will permit a 24-hour watch over the patients by trained nurses who can spot a change in heart rhythm immediately on screens which pick up signals from the units.

SAVE 30 LIVES

Hospital officials estimate the telemetry units will save about 30 lives a year.

The units will work in conjunction with stationary heart monitors established in special acute care wards in both hospitals 10 months ago.

Donations for the equipment can be made to the Kiwanis Heart Equipment Fund, at 221 Linden Ave. Those who wish to may specify that their donation be applied to one hospital or the other.

Retired 20 Years, Businessman Dies

Funeral services will be held Wednesday for Arthur H. Nation, 81, 1051 Beach Drive, who died Monday after living in Victoria since his retirement 20 years ago as an investment counsellor.

Born in Brandon, Man. in 1887, he attended Upper Canada College and Royal Military College before taking a position with an investment firm in Montreal.

He later joined Great West Life Assurance, working in Western Canada before his retirement.

Mr. Nation was an active member of the Union and Victoria Golf Clubs until his recent illness.

He is survived by one son, George, in Montreal.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. at Hayward's Funeral Chapel. Rev. C. D. Blencoe will officiate.

12 Witnesses Killed

LUSAKA — Twelve Jehovah's Witnesses have been killed in clashes with Zambia's ruling United National Independence party in the remote Lake Bangweulu area, the government-controlled press reported Monday. One member of the religious sect claimed there was "full - scale persecution" of members because they refused to vote in last month's general election.

C. Saanich Budget Hiked by Welfare

Central Saanich council Monday set aside $31,497 to buy a new fire truck.

It's the largest capital expenditure in this year's provisional budget estimated at $365,887, an increase of $50,376 over last year's.

The truck will replace an older vehicle.

The vehicle, however, is not mainly responsible for the budget increase because $19,500 was set aside by previous councils to buy it.

The boost in expenditure is largely due to social welfare which is expected to increase from $29,829 to $46,864.

There were some slight increases in expenditures for some of the departments, ranging between $500 and $1,000.

Municipal clerk Fred Durrand told council it is too early yet to determine if taxes will go up.

DEPEND ON GRANTS

"It will depend on the size of government grants," he said.

A bylaw approving establishment of a secondary road was given third reading by council.

It starts at Keating Cross Road, along Central Saanich, Saanich Cross Road, down to Island View Road to the Patricia Bay Highway.

The provincial government has agreed to pay 50 per cent of the cost for improving and maintaining the highway.

B-A has changed its name to Gulf Canada...

the Canadian member of the world-wide Gulf Oil family.

The Gulf Oil family is active in more than 50 countries including Canada where B-A and Gulf have been working together for over a decade.

Last year alone, B-A and Gulf spent millions of dollars creating better things for tomorrow. Products for homes, farms and industries. Products for automobiles and aircraft, marine and railroad use. Products to make our lives easier, safer and more pleasant.

The new Gulf Canada name will enable us to make better use of Gulf's world-wide resources and technical knowledge. As a result, you will be able to get the same fine products and service, wherever you go.

Take travel. With our Travel Card, you can charge gas, oil, parts and service at more than 38,000 Gulf stations in North America. You can also use this card to rent a car or stay at Holiday Inns (the world's largest chain of luxury motels) anywhere across the continent.

Of course, with thousands and thousands of stations to change, it's going to take us quite a while to make all Gulf Canada stations look like Gulf Canada stations. Signs, pumps, uniforms—everything has to change. We're working on it.

Watch for the signs.

Had anyone predicted 20 years ago that The Saturday Evening Post wouldn't live to greet the 70s, nobody in the magazine trade would have taken him seriously.

The Post, with its enormous advertising revenue and readership, was the queen of the weeklies. Gibraltar would fall sooner!

But last week, despite all efforts to save her, the journal that claimed Ben Franklin as founder ended her struggle to survive. With her Feb. 8 issue off the presses, she succumbed to starvation, at the age of 148, in alien New York.

It was a sad end for the Post, whose home through most of her years overlooked Philadelphia's Independence Square. Even though she and I had no recent dealings, I'm sorry to see her go. In her long prime, she was the greatest of the fiction-carrying popular magazines, and with her demise, an era has ended.

In her years of power and pride, she ran two serial instalments each week, along with four short stories and sometimes a novelette. It was a fiction banquet unmatched among her competitors, and it offered to the world a set of story-people not easily forgotten.

★

Tugboat Annie was one, and Glencannon, the Scots engineer of the Inchcliffe Castle, another.

Remember the Earthworm Tractor Company and its letter-writing salesman, and Canadian Ross Annett's "Little Babe"?

From midshipman through to admiral, Horatio Hornblower paced those pages.

And didn't Erle Stanley Gardner's Perry Mason solve his first case—The Cat and the Canary—in Post?

Those were "series" characters, but Post also shone as a magazine whose doors were open to the beginner. Through much of its life, its editors made a boast that no manuscript in its "slush-pile" of unsolicited contributions went unread.

They were hard to please; but when they turned up a writer who could cut their mustard, they were generous of time and effort in bringing him along.

By this I don't mean that they coddled him. Far from it! If he or the agent who represented him turned in a clinker, it would be slung back no matter how many stories he had sold to Post before.

Although the magazine paid top prices, it rarely dispensed praise, and I cherish acceptances far more gruffly worded than its rejections.

★

Like most who gained entry to its pages, I came in by the slush-pile route. In the years that followed, I made it through the Post's barbed wire about 40 times—from writer's superstition, I've never run off a complete total.

This long association was not always sunshiny, and for one 18-month period, we weren't even on speaking terms.

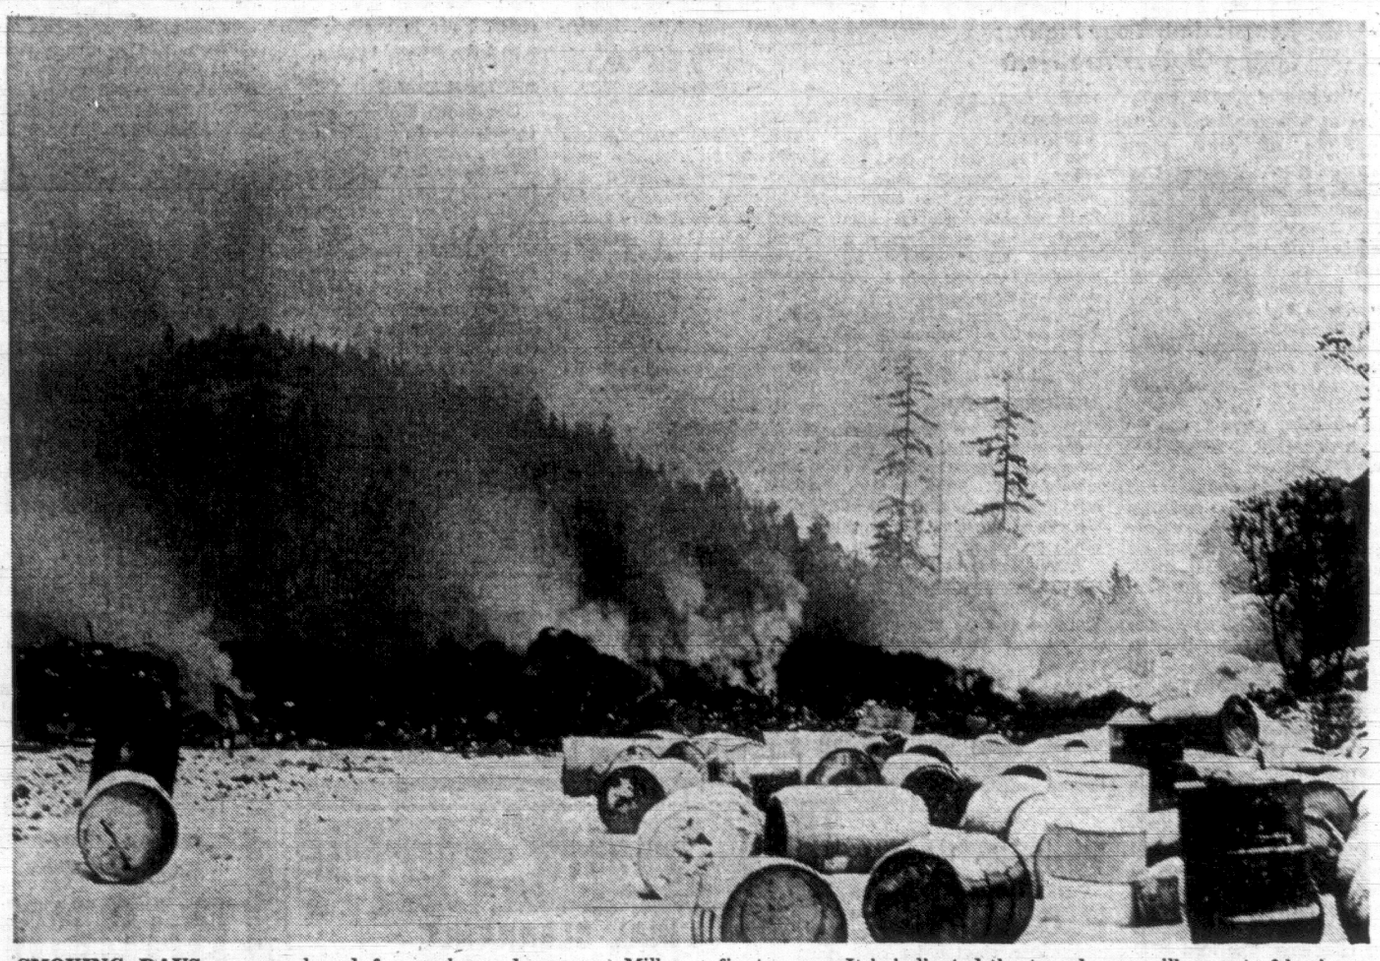

But I remember Post much better for other reasons, and the chief of these is the pleasure of meeting and working with two of the best fiction editors in the business.

One is E. N. "Erd" Brandt, a man tall, lean and wonderfully kind. The American Civil War was his study, classic cars his hobby, and magazine fiction his love. Erd Brandt retired some years ago, but Bob Murphy—writer, story-doctor and naturalist in his spare time—is now a productive free-lance with several books to his credit.

They were good men, and part of a crack editorial staff. But television drained the advertising which is a magazine's lifeblood, and no amount of circulation can compensate for such a loss.

The Saturday Evening Post figured large in my working life for a long time, and even though she was subjected in her decline to changes that went far beyond the dropping of her Norman Rockwell covers, I retained a feeling for her.

Many magazines have perished in the past two decades, but this was the best of them.

SMOKING DAYS are numbered for garbage dumps on Millstream Road but this morning they were giving off heavy, defiant screen. It is indicated the two dumps will go out of business because they won't operate under no-burning edict.

Millstream Dumps To Close

Operations Doomed By Ban on Burning

Burning of garbage at two dumps in the Highland istrict north of Langford is coming to an end.

When this happens, only one garbage dump will e left to serve southern Vancouver Island—at Hartland oad, north of Prospect Lake.

Last year the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health uled that burning at garbage dumps will end Jan. 1, and after at date it must be compacted and covered.

This is being done at the Hartland Road dump, owned by Victoria Disposal Company.

The two Millstream Road dumps—Scafe's Dump Garbage Disposal and Highland Sanitary Centre Garbage Disposal—continued burning in defiance of the health board regulations.

Reports circulated this morning that garbage burning was coming to an end and rather than meet the new regulations, the dumps will close.

W. D. Scafe was not available for comment. There was no answer at the dump telephone this morning.

R. F. Rant, who runs the other dump, also was not available. But his wife said the dump is "more or less officially shut."

The Millstream Road dumps not only serve the unincorporated areas of Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and Sooke, where 20,000 people live, but also receive garbage from the urban areas and from sawmills and other private companies.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, confirmed this morning that a group went to the dumps Monday to inspect them. The group found conditions the same as before, with burning continuing.

But he denied one report that the health board has ordered the dumps to close.

"We have issued no letter other than the letter of last November saying they will have to stop burning on Jan. 1," he said.

"We are waiting to see what arrangements they make. There have been a lot of complaints that we've closed these dumps but we have not taken any action yet."

The procedure for action, should it be taken, is to lay an information and it would then be up to a magistrate to rule, he added.

Dr. Whitbread also said two municipalities are in the process of transferring from Millstream to Hartland Road but he declined to identify them.

"We have not ordered them to close," he said emphatically. "It is up to them to comply with the regulations.

Snow Socks Up-Island; Schools, Industry Hit

20,000 Loggers Forced Out; Schools Close at Port Alberni

The capital region continues to keep a relative weather calm while districts all around are losing theirs.

Motorists were forced down to a 20-mile-an-hour limit as they crawled over the treacherous Malahat and into periodic blizzard conditions in Duncan and the Cowichan Valley.

In Port Alberni, schools were closed because buses could not leave the main highway to pick up students this morning.

In Vancouver, rush-hour traffic slowed to a crawl after a heavy snowfall throughout the lower mainland. In places up to five inches of fresh snow were recorded, causing long lineups of traffic on main routes as well as side roads.

Throughout the province, thousands were late for work and weather continued to hamper industry and schools.

LOGGERS HIT

Some 20,000 loggers were idled and Island operations were at a virtual standstill. A MacMillan Bloedel spokesman reported only skeleton operations are being maintained. Crown Zellerbach added that they are not engaged in any falling operations.

North Cowichan and Duncan got another two to three inches of snow overnight.

Lake Cowichan appeared to be hardest hit. Six inches were added to the 62 that have fallen since Jan. 1 and chains, not snow tires alone, are required on most roads.

FREEZING RAIN

Different parts of Victoria got a light snowfall overnight, other parts were touched with freezing rain.

There was even lightning, as an unstable weather system off the Island's northwest coast spawned thunderstorms and sent them whizzing in a long curve towards the mainland.

In Burnaby, the freak storms gave senior secondary school students the day off after the lightning affected electrical circuits which operate the school's heating plant.

The villain is a low-pressure system off the coast that is pulling frigid air from the north, sweeping it over the relatively warm ocean then sending it in unstable blotches towards the southeast.

ALL AT ONCE

The result can be as varied as the snow, rain and hail that were all falling at once over Vancouver during the night.

Heaviest snowfalls have been in the Island's interior. Port Alberni has been hit with 13 inches since the weekend bringing the total in the Alberni Valley centre to nearly 64 inches for the year.

The Tofino - Ucluelet Highway is barely passable and motorists are advised to use chains. Road crews kept Gold River's link with the east coast open despite blizzards Monday. Bulldozers were needed to clear streets between nine-foot drifts.

Despite heavy going nearby, the Trans-Canada Highway to Nanaimo and the Island highway north are mostly in good condition. At Nanaimo and Campbell River all schools were open and officials reported buses had no difficulties making their pickups this morning.

The new snowfall brings Vancouver's total for the winter to nearly 40 inches, considerably above normal. In December, 23.9 inches were recorded, compared to the 3.5 inches normally expected.

Temperatures in Victoria are expected to range between 32 and 40 Wednesday as more light snow showers and rain are predicted.

HISTORIC LIGHTS COME DOWN

Seven strings of decorative downtown street lights raised 32 years ago to commemorate the crowning of George VI are coming down.

City council's traffic committee supported the recommendation of traffic engineer David Campbell today after he said the clamps and bolts attaching the strings to buildings have deteriorated and now represent a hazard.

The colored lights stretch across Fisgard and Johnson streets between Store and Government streets. They are all that remain of the display erected for the coronation in 1937. The others came down when much of the downtwn wiring went underground.

Mr. Campbell's report said the city has turned the lights on each Christmas at the request of merchants but an inspection this year uncovered the shaky links.

He said he could not recommend spending the money needed for repair and suggested the light strings were no longer compatible with modern Christmas decorations.

EVENING RATES

In other business, the traffic committee decided to recommend to the parking authority that a charge of 25 cents for evening parking be standardized through all three downtown parking facilities. The parking authority had asked permission to install a meter in the Bastion parking building for those using it in the evening.

The public works committee agreed to increase patrols of the Centennial parking building after hearing a letter from a woman complaining of an incident last month.

The writer said the elevator was immobilized when someone defecated in it. The building's elevator has been a constant target for vandals and is out of order much of the time.

The committee approved an increase of from 25 cents to 50 cents a cubic yard for those disposing of garbage at the city garbage wharf on Store Street.

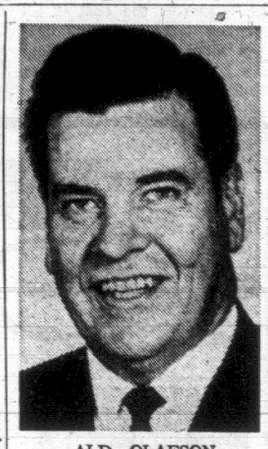

Young Wardens Attend Workshop

Twenty Junior Forest Wardens from throughout Vancouver Island attended a workshop held Sunday in Nanaimo.

The organization is sponsored by the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C. to instruct youths on conservation of natural resources.

Leaders and counsellors exchanged ideas on club activities at the workshop.

The program was under the direction of D. D. Campbell, supervisor of the Coast Region of the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C.

RADICAL FILMS ON VIEW

The National Film Board has produced a handy-dandy kit of six films for the social revolutionary which are to be previewed at a public screening Jan. 21 at 8 p.m. in the board's theatre, 911 Wharf.

Originally intended for professionals in social welfare and community development, the board will rent out the films which "can be readily used by minority groups and individuals interested in social change" in Canada.

The form part of an NFB program called "Challenge for Change." The new series focuses on Saul Alinsky, Chicago's Industrial Area Foundation head who, as a professional activist, has led minority groups into battle against various establishments in Canada and the U.S.

The films deal with the Alinsky philosophy, methods of organization, results and the continuing responsibilities of activist groups within a community.

Expansion Approved At Rocky Pt. School

The provincial treasury board has authorized expenditure of $27,000 for expansion of the Rocky Point elementary school and $10,000 for relocation of the Happy Valley school, it was announced today.

Aldermen Refuse To Back Down On Parking Ban

Victoria city traffic committee stood fast in the face of a pressure lobby this morning and refused to lift a ban on overnight parking.

The ban goes into effect Wednesday night with only a slight change in the hours.

Nick Renard, manager of the Olympic Hotel, led a large delegation of hotel and restaurant owners to challenge Ald. Harold Olafson chairing his first traffic committee meeting since taking office.

Mr. Renard said a parking ban between the hours of 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. would be "catastrophic to certain hotels" which would be bound to lose their night trade to other areas.

FORCED TO CLOSE

Tony Else, manager of AJ's dine and dance establishment, said the ban would virtually force him to close his doors.

"It would have the immediate effect of putting me out of business," he said.

The night spot favored by young swingers operates until 2 a.m.

Ald. Olafson asked if an adjustment in the starting hour of the parking ban from 1 a.m. to 2:30 a.m. would help.

Mr. Else answered that he would have no objection if the hours were adjusted, but added that he still sympathized with the plight of small hotel operators who lacked parking facilities for their guests.

A. B. Auchinvole representing the Century Inn urged the committee to consider the plight of the downtown hotel operator already hard hit by cut-price motels on the fringes of the city.

"Occupancy of our rooms during the winter months has become a matter of simple survival," he said. "A total ban on parking in the downtown area for overnight periods will make our position just that much more difficult. It isn't generally admitted but Victoria is a 90-day town. For the other nine months of the year the downtown hotel operator has to struggle really hard to survive."

The Century has limited parking for customers and provides car-jockeys for customers once the hotel lot is full. During the night hours they use city streets, the Centennial Square parking facility or private lots.

UNMOVED

Mr. Auchinvole said the four-hour ban could only hurt the hotel trade.

But the committee was unmoved by the plea.

Mayor Hugh Stephen noted that every time city council tried to take a progressive step there were howls from the business community that disaster would follow.

"Last summer we had many complaints from tourists, the people who deal with you, that our city was very dirty," he said. "We listened to those complaints and are trying to do something about them.

"I disagree with you when you say Victoria doesn't need to sweep its streets at night, that it is a clean city.

'DIRTY CITY'

"Last summer Victoria was a dirty city, of that there is no doubt."

After the delegation left Ald. Olafson suggested a change in the total ban times.

"I have talked with the city engineer and the traffic engineer and Mr. (James) Garnett assured me that if all cars are off the streets the sweeping and cleaning operation can be done in three hours or less," he said.

Mayor Stephen won a unanimous vote to support his motion that the ban go into effect on schedule with the adjusted times of 2:30 a.m. to 5:30 a.m.

In accepting the motion Ald. Olafson said he had a great deal of sympathy for the plight of hotel operators lacking any type or parking facility.

"But they all have parking facilities within a block or a block and a half of their establishments," he said. "It is a problem, but it is a problem they must solve."

For the first few weeks of the ban city police will be instructed to take a generous attitude to violators by posting warning tickets on windshields.

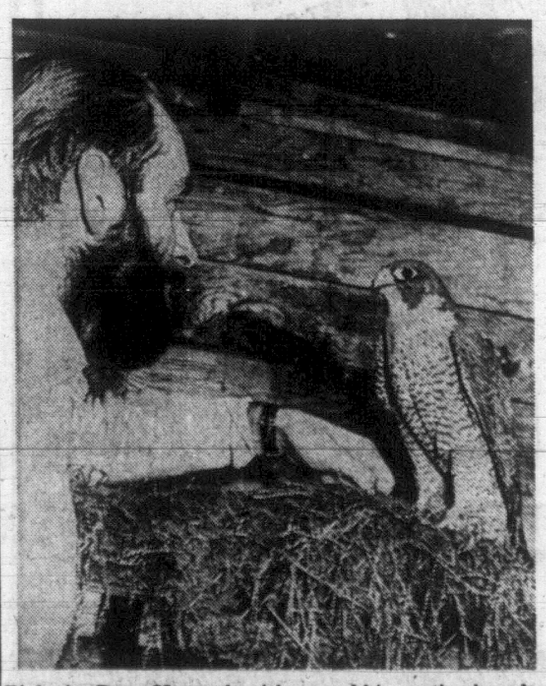

After that period of education a minimum $5 fine will be imposed.

School Official To Retire

Joseph Chell, superintendent of the Greater Victoria school district, told a special meeting of the school board Monday night that he will retire this summer.

His announcement was not unexpected. He will be 65 this year and has served as superintendent since the resignation of John Gough in 1966.

Board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson will head a committee of trustees to confer with the deputy education minister on a successor. Front runner is A. J. Longmore, the assistant district superintendent, but the job is a government appointment. The school board is permitted to pick from a list offered by the education department.

Lecture to Examine Hard-Luck Falcons

The Provincial Museum today announced a series of illustrated lectures at two-week intervals will begin Friday at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Leading off the series, entitled Heritage Court Presents, will be Dave Hancock, director of the Wildlife Conservation Centre at Island View Beach.

His lecture will deal with the adventures and misadventures experienced during the past summer studying eagles, peregrine falcons and other wildlife on the west coast of Vancouver Island and on the northern coast of the province.

Mr Hancock said this morning he welcomes the chance to give this lecture because it will help further public edutation in wildlife conservation.

He said he is especially concerned about peregrine falcons and that a special research project is being carried out at the Wildlife Conservation Centre to study captive propagation.

"Peregrines have been disappearing around the world," he said. "This is primarily due to pesticide poisoning and human disturbance of their breeding grounds.

"As with the whooping crane it has become necessary to undertake studies of captive propagation as one technique to ensure propagation of the species.

He said this sort of a study has not been done previously because it takes three years for a peregrine to mature and five more to breed.

"We have set up a number of breeding pens, but it's going to be a long-term project," he added.

Admission to all lectures is free.

Educators To Meet In City

About 200 educators will meet in Victoria Jan. 27-29 to discuss education matters including student power and school research, Fred Whitworth, director of the Canadian Council for Research in Education, said in Ottawa today.

Mr. Whitworth said the conference will be mainly a discussion forum for representatives of provincial education departments, university education faculties, educational associations and school boards.

Historic Tales Encourage Study

By PENNY SAVER

"I think children are too future-oriented for their own good," commented one mother. We had gathered together to sip tea and discuss the affairs of the world. As usual, the subject had worked around to our own private world—children. "Take Billy, for instance. At the drop of a hat he can explain several different ways of travelling through space—most of which would boggle the scientists at Cape Kennedy. It will be all very well if he grows up and invents a method of locomotion using the gravitational and magnetic forces of the universe, but I still wish he took more of an interest in history." "Trouble is," joined in another, "that science fiction books for children are more exciting than Black Beauty, or even Black Arrow. King Arthur just can't compete with Martian monsters."

This may be true, but I have seen many a child completely entranced by tales from history—it all depends on the way they are presented. No child of impressionable age can wade through Malory, no matter how eager he is to learn the Arthurian legends, and his frustrations may put him off the subject forever. That is why I was so pleased to find the series of books entitled Adventures from History. These are large, handsome hard-cover books with a price any parent will welcome—$2.49. The print is clear and readable while the text is illustrated with color pictures that capture the feeling of the tale yet are impressionistic enough to look modern. I would hate to set an age-group for these tales since a child of six or seven may love to listen while a child of 10 may read with interest and keep reading until he has acquired the patience to attack the "adult" language of the originals. Among the stories covered in this series are the travels of Marco Polo, the legend of Siegfried, legends of the Round Table, the voyages of Christopher Columbus and Cortes and the conquest of Mexico.

Spots Away

There are times when it is impossible for me to keep silent, even when it is polite to do so. This happened recently when I was straightening my hair in a department store washroom while a complete stranger was busy removing a spot from her lovely, and obviously quite new, coat. She reached into her purse and took out a little plastic bag containing a cardboard tube topped with a sponge and a brush. She proceeded to press a powder onto the spot from the tube. "Does it really work?" I asked unable to contain myself any longer. "I've always had good results," my companion replied. The powder is rubbed into the spot then brushed away, taking the stain with it. This method leaves no ring and the manufacturers claim their cleaner is safe for all fabrics. It can be used on rugs and upholstery as well as clothing, and will remove grease, oil, street dirt and most food stains. There are two sizes available at 59 cents or $1.19.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where to find these items.

Cooking Can Be Fun By Mary Moore

Tampering Didn't Mar Success of This Dish

Since last May I have been planning to try Mrs. M. S.'s Breasts of Chicken Parisienne but I was put off with one step in the recipe: "heat brandy, set aflame, pour over chicken."

Moore

I know the majority of our readers will not make this dish because of that one ingredient so I simply decided to ignore it and leave it out. I am glad I made the dish for even without the flamboyant brandy ingredient it is wonderful.

CHICKEN BREASTS PARISIENNE

(Courtesy Mrs. M. S., tampered with by Mary.)

(Serves six adequately but not generously.)

Six single chicken breasts, 4 tablespoons (¼ cup) butter, ½ pound scrubbed and sliced mushrooms, 4 tablespoons (¼ cup) chopped onion (or bottled flakes), ¼ teaspoon garlic salt, ½ teaspoon tarragon, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon catsup, 1 Oxo cube, 1 chicken Oxo cube, 1 cup hot water, ½ cup 10 per cent (cereal) cream.

In large frying pan melt butter and in it brown the chicken breasts until golden. Remove chicken breasts to plate and set aside. To pan add scrubbed and sliced mushrooms and chopped onion and saute for about one minute. Then sprinkle over them the garlic salt, tarragon and flour and stir in. Add all remaining ingredients and stir until thickened. Arrange browned chicken breasts on top and simmer covered about 40 to 45 minutes or until breasts are tender. Two or three times during cooking period baste breasts with the sauce. Be sure your heat is turned very low for this thickened sauce could stick if heat is above "simmer."

This is a rich chicken dish you should clip and add to your guest dinner file.

Thank you, Mrs. M. S.

(NOTE: Instead of simmering period, this dish may be baked, covered, at 300 deg. Fahr. for one hour.)

WHY GROW OLD?

BY JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Reconditioned Figure Pays Exciting Dividends

Recondition Your Figure; Spring Clothes Are Near

This time of year is like the eye of a hurricane. In case you do not know about hurricanes, the eye is the centre and it is deathly quiet. The first part of the hurricane hits with all of its fury. Then comes the eye and you thankfully think it is all over, when bang, the other side unexpectedly whams you.

Lowman

Now all of the confusion and hecticness and noise and rush and fun of the holiday season are over and we feel that we can "let down" a bit. BUT, almost before we know it spring will be here with its flowers and lovely new clothes. This is the time to recondition the figure to fit those clothes. Don't let the lull fool you!

Today is the seventh day on my Eight Week Beauty Improvement Plan. In order to bring those of you who missed the first part of this series up to date, let me repeat. For nine days I am bringing you information and directions so that you can carry on by yourself for eight weeks. I am also printing reducing menus for nine days. The idea is to see how much you can improve yourself in that time and to lose from 15 to 20 pounds if you need to.

GOOD NUTRITION

When planning slimming menus be sure to remember good nutrition as well as calories. Being overweight does not necessarily mean that a woman is well nourished. Often the opposite is true. The high-calorie foods which pile the pounds on are often very low in essential nutrients. When reducing, there are too few allowable calories to spend many of them carelessly.

Be guided by the four basic food groups. These are:

1. Milk and milk products.
2. Meat, fish, sea foods, eggs, poultry.
3. Whole grain or enriched breads and cereals.
4. Fruits and vegetables.

Your daily diet should include food from all four categories.

You need some fat in your diet but hold this to about 100 calories a day. Cut down on carbohydrates and concentrate on fish, poultry, lean meat, vegetables and fruits. A medium baked potato is an excellent reducing item if you do not dunk it in butter. Two glasses of skim milk substitutes such as buttermilk or cottage cheese should be included each day.

PREPARE FOOD

Remember that the way you prepare food makes a tremendous difference in its calorie count. Bake, broil or boil. If you fry food be sure to use one of the non-stick pans which do not require any fat.

You do not have to prepare separate meals for your family. Tomorrow; more about that and how to divide your daily calorie intake.

MENUS

BREAKFAST

Visitors From Vancouver Give Glimpse Of What Proves to Be a Real Dutch Treat

Last spring's swimsuits begin to look a little passe after this week's glance at what an enterprising Dutch company has come up with this year. As an example, this suit, complete with peasant-style sleeves, hit the fashion news columns last June. It bears little resemblance to the swimwear viewed this week. (CP Photo.)

By PAT DUFOUR

If you were to indulge in a little word association, what would you team with Dutch? If it was Dutch treat, Dutch oven, tulips, or even scrupulously meticulous housewives I'm sure any psychiatrist would pronounce you normal. Were you to settle for bikinis and beautiful girls, he'd probably decide you were in need of a little intensive care, especially if you were a female.

Yet, after meeting Sax Romero and his wife "Hank" this week, I'll never be able to disassociate thoughts of beautiful bodies in luscious swimsuits from the land of windmills.

"Hank" (her real name is Harriet) and Sax are here from Vancouver to woo retailers with a spring line of swimwear brought out by a Dutch company whose products rate them in the top-drawer league. As you must have guessed, the models they choose for their publicity releases are no also-rans either!

EAT—THEN PAY LATER

Having reached the age when slithering into a swimsuit after the annual year-end food-fest is tantamount to committing moral suicide, I was a little reluctant when Sax phoned from the Empress Hotel, inviting me down to see the new creations. What I don't need at this moment is a grim reminder of the extra calories I consumed during the holiday snow-siege.

Surreptitiously I tried to tuck those tummy muscles in as Sax showed me through the lineup. There were models for every woman: bikinis for those who've paid heed to Josephine Lowman's warnings on diet; more conventional styles for we timid folks, and semi-bikinis for those who favor the double-take. The firm has dubbed the latter "semikinis," and they're perfect for women whose stomachs aren't their best features ... and who's is? Viewed front-side they're proper enough for the "Y" swim team; but a glance at the back will have you wondering whether you've bought one of those suits the Australian lifeguards have been complaining about.

COULD BE?

I was intrigued to see one suit (each has its own name) was labelled Ganges. It was in a wild, wild print and I wondered if it had been named for some of the boisterous boating parties I've attended there.

I guessed wrong. It was named for the river in India. The Nile might have been more appropriate because all the firm's spring styles for 1969 were filmed in Africa ... no wonder the Dutch models in the pictures wore such broad smiles!

The company uses a fabulous material for its swimwear. It's 100 per cent Antron, with a two-way stretch that's both flattering and consoling to those of us who fail to head the body-beautiful poll.

CONTOUR COLLAPSE

Each has a built-in bra. I can see you scoffing now. I don't blame you. I, too, have spent my mad-money on a suit that's left me to my own deflated dimensions after a few wettings.

These bras should work. They're made of plastic and look soft, and as dependable as an old-fashoned corset. What's more, if you've a yen to do a little designing of your own a couple of snips with the scissors will provide what you think is the real you.

A full-length view in the mirror convinces me that I should leave the contour-shaping alone. It's better to go Dutch ... all the way!

National Project

A national project, instigated by the Victoria Municipal Chapter IODE has been undertaken by the National Chapter IODE. Its president, Mrs. Gordon D. Leggett, announced this week that an initial contribution of $1,000,000 has been donated to Dr. Elizabeth Case, ophthalmic surgeon with the federal department of national health and welfare services.

For more than 10 years Dr. Case has treated the eyes of Eskimo, Indian and white people in an effort to save sight and prevent blindness. The donation will enable Dr. Case to begin a feasibility study which may lead to the establishing of an eye research centre in the Northwest Territories.

DEAR ABBY ...

Cut the Kissing —Face the Facts

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 years old, have been working for nearly a year in a place that's way out in the sticks and not very easy to get to. My problem is the man I ride to and from work with. He is 53, married, and has grown children.

Abby, I started giving this man a little peck on the cheek every time he took me home, but now I'm having a terrible time getting him to stop at one kiss. I know I shouldn't have started up with him in the first place because I can't stand him, but I don't drive and this man picks me up at my door every morning and brings me home after work, and he never asked for a dime.

The free transportation was a good deal before he got so chummy. How can I keep this old man in his place and not lose my rides?

NO TURNING BACK

DEAR NO: You probably can't, so now would be a good time to find a job that's easier to get to. Nothing is free, so prepare to pay for your transportation in cash, cut out the kissing, and kiss off this old lecher for good.

DEAR ABBY: I have always heard that a wife can help her husband to succeed in business. Exactly how can she do this? I mean, don't some wives try too hard and spoil things for their husbands?

I am 24 and my husband is 27. He's a junior executive with an ad agency and has lots of talent and ambition, but I'd like to do everything I can to help him.

I'm a beautician and am still working, but will quit as soon as I get pregnant. (We've been working on that for about a year, but so far, no luck. Any advice there?)

TINA

DEAR TINA: You can help your husband by letting him know you have confidence in his ability to succeed. You can be a good sport if he has to work late or take a business trip without you.

You can send him to work looking like a "winner"—well-pressed clothes, clean shirts and ties, and not in need of a haircut. (I don't expect you to cut his hair, but you can "remind" him when he needs it.)

Listen when he wants to talk, and be quiet when he doesn't. Encourage him to climb, but but be patient, and don't nag or make comparisons. And about that "family" you're working on. Check in with your friendly neighborhood doctor.

DEAR ABBY: After 21 years of marriage I still call my husband at work just to say "I love you."

Who knows? After he leaves for work one of us may not live through the day. I know it's company time, but I love the guy and I think it helps him to do a better job just knowing how important he is to our five children and me. And you can sign my name. I don't care who knows it.

ROSE AUCHINLECK

CONFIDENTIAL TO WALLY: Don't fight it. He'd rather switch.

U.S. Domination Threat Of Universities Fading

OTTAWA (CP)—The threat of U.S. domination of Canadian universities is "a disappearing problem" largely confined to the country's newer institutions of higher learning, a Canada Council official says.

Frank Milligan, who directs the council's program of help for graduate students in the humanities and social sciences, said Monday the problem is disappearing because many more qualified Canadians are becoming available for university posts and more of them are staying home for their post-graduate work.

"Maybe in three years, certainly in five, the supply will be equal to the demand."

Mr. Milligan said in an interview that graduate schools in the humanities and social sciences now are developing rapidly in Canada.

"In fact, I would say this is the most rapidly growing part of Canadian universities now."

GROWTH WAS RAPID

He said Canadian universities have grown so fast in the last 10 years they have "nearly exploded."

Older institutions, such as McGill in Montreal, Dalhousie in Halifax and Queen's in Kingston, Ont., had a solid base upon which to expand. But the many new universities of the last decade had to grow quickly from scratch and became much more dependent on imported professors.

"If they hadn't hired abroad, they could never have developed," said Mr. Milligan, speaking of such universities as Simon Fraser in Vancouver and York in Toronto.

He said it appears to have been relatively easy for new Canadian universities to recruit good faculty members in the United States, but the reasons for this are uncertain.

His own theory is that their are two reasons for it:—

1. The position of the Canadian university professor, in terms of salary, of status and of facilities available to him, has improved greatly in the last 10 years.

2. Many American professors may feel that on the smaller and newer Canadian university scene, "they can make more of an impact as individuals."

WORTHY OF STUDY

"But these are only my impressions," Mr. Milligan added. "It would repay somebody to examine the situation and find out precisely why so many American professors like to come to this country."

In recent months, increasing attention has been paid to the number of Canadians getting their graduate training in the United States, the number of Americans teaching at Canadian universities, and the effect on what is taught in Canadian graduate schools and how it is taught.

Mr. Milligan said it is becoming less and less necessary for Canadian students to go abroad for advanced study and research, although there will always be some who do.

Winners of doctoral fellowships from the Canada Council may use them anywhere. He said more than two out of every five winners last year chose to study in Canada and "there is a fair chance that we will hit 50 per cent this year." Two years ago, the proportion staying in Canada was only one in three.

This trend had developed "without any conscious effort" on the part of the Canada Council, which offered no particular inducements to its fellows to do their work in Canada.

11 More Convicted In Quebec Riot Case

MONTREAL (CP) — Eleven more persons have pleaded guilty in municipal court to charges of participation in a riot brought in connection with the disturbances which enveloped the St. Jean Baptiste Day parade in Montreal. Each was fined $50 and costs by Judge Paul Champagne.

The 11 guilty pleas entered Monday brought to 35 the number of accused who have so pleaded since the court began processing the 221 persons arrested during the June 24 demonstration.

Judge Champagne also issued bench warrants against three persons who did not appear to hearing. He postponed hearing of four more cases, committed another four persons to trial and liberated three persons.

Bernard Bilodeau, chief Crown prosecutor, said that a total of 114 cases have been dropped to lack of evidence, and, apart from the 35 persons who have pleaded guilty to various charges, a total of eight persons have been liberated after hearing. Another 45, including the four of Monday, have been committed to trial in the higher court.

Among those committed to trial are Pierre Bourgault, former leader of the now defunct separatist party, the Rassemblement pour l'independance nationale, and Reggie Chartrand, head of the Chevaliers de l'independance.

The riot broke out in the middle of the parade when more than 400 slogan-chanting youths clashed with police in an attempt to storm a reviewing stand on which were seated Prime Minister Trudeau, the late premier Daniel Johnson and Mayor Jean Drapeau of Montreal.

Mr. Bourgault faces a charge of participation in a riot, while Mr. Chartrand is charged with three counts of assault on police officers.

City Man Dismissed From Robbery Count

A robbery charge against a Victoria man was dismissed in county court Monday when the victim reversed his earlier identification.

Glen Wright, 27, of 569 Toronto, was freed after a second man testified he was solely responsible for robbing 87-year-old Yong Chong of $32.

Mr. Yong told Judge Montague Tyrwhitt Drake he had been "confused" at an earlier hearing in which he identified Wright as having struck him several times while the second man, holding him from behind, went through his pockets.

Roderick O'Toole, 34, testified the Nov. 19 assallt was "done all by myself" at the Herald Street rooming house where he and Wright had spent the afternoon drinking.

SENTENCED TO JAIL

O'Toole pleaded guilty to robbery and was sentenced in magistrate's court to 2½ years. Wright elected trial by a higher court.

Mr. Yong said he went to the police after the assault then, accompanied by detectives, went to a Gorge Road motel where the accused were found drinking.

Charged with robbery, the pair were taken to the police station and testimony showed Wright was in possession of some of the money, including United States currency, taken from Mr. Yong.

O'Toole told the court he had given Wright the money in payment for liquor Wright had purchased during the day.

George Jones, counsel for Wright, said testimony showed his client had not participated in the offence and entered a motion for dismissal which Judge Drake accepted.

Trustees to Meet Teachers Over Education Objectives

Saanich Peninsula school trustees will meet teachers to try and define education objectives.

"If we can agree on some objectives maybe we can agree on how to get there," John Armstrong, chairman of the school board's education committee, said today.

Teachers are pressing for a number of innovations, such as open-area classrooms, team teaching and individual progress for pupils.

Some of these may be worthwhile but there is little research to support them so far and they may prove to be expensive, Mr. Armstrong said.

The trouble with innovations is that education objectives have yet to be defined, he added.

"I don't feel teachers are the best people to decide what the objectives in education are."

For that reason he wants to call in people from the business world to tell what they want in young people. Then it will be up to the teachers to provide it with trustees interfering as little as possible.

SCHOOL ADDITIONS

A liaison committee of teachers and trustees already exists and it will be expanded to debate objectives, said the committee chairman.

He first announced the plan at a meeting of the school board Monday night.

In other business, building superintendent Bryan Shaw said working drawings on six school additions costing $750,000 will likely be submitted to the department of education in about two weeks.

The high priority projects, called "critical" by Mr. Shaw, are at Claremont high school, and Brentwood, Sidney, Deep Cove, Saanichton and Keating elementary schools.

Durrance, Royal Oak elementary and high schools, North Saanich, Sansbury and Lochside schools suffered some damage from freezing and flooding during the post-Christmas cold weather, the board was told.

Mrs. Rubymay Parrott, the board's new chairman, announced the following committee appointments for the new year:

Finance, Charles MacNeill; education, John Armstrong; buildings, Vernon Beaumont, sites and planning, Stanley Oakes; transportation, Zachary Hamilton; personnel, George Howard; health, Mrs. Parrott, and public relations, Mrs. Parrott.

Main Home Problem Cutting Red Tape

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Paul Hellyer said Monday a major cause of Canada's housing problems is "a morass of conflicting standards, restrictive regulations and misguided plans."

He said cutting red tape will be a main aim of recommendations by the housing commission he leads.

The seven-member inquiry is expected to report near the end of this month.

Mr. Hellyer told the national conference of the Canadian Home Manufacturers' Association that bylaws to require lots of at least 50-foot frontage are an example of "over-regulation."

"The core theme underlying much of our report . . . will be how to use efficiently our resources to build more accommodation.

He said every level of government should try to provide "a minimum in control and the maximum in encouragement for change and efficiency" in residential development.

One starting point would be adoption of the new National Building Code and another would be for building unions "to take a close look at their own practices."

Plans Auditions In Vancouver

New York's Metropolitan Opera will hold auditions for aspiring singers in Vancouver Feb. 16.

Applications from Western Canada must be mailed to Dr. Ida Halpern, 2505 Wallace Crescent in Vancouver, by Feb. 8.

Winners of the Vancouver audition will go to Seattle for the regional auditions Feb. 23. Winners in Seattle will then go to New York to audition before members of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Finalists at this stage will be given six months and "substantial awards" to prepare themselves for the national finals in New York next November.

Contestants must be in the following age brackets: sapranos, 17 to 28; messo-contraltos, 19 to 30; tenors and baritones, 20 to 30; and basses, 20 to 32.

CONTAINERIZED SHIPPING scheme for Outer Wharf area proposed by George Farmer, chairman of Victoria Chamber of Commerce harbor and transpotation group, would include filling in the portion of James Bay indicated by dotted line. Re-claimed land area would become part of a large complex of automated equipment, docking facilities and warehouses extending from the Ogden Point docks to the Victoria Machinery Depot property at left. James Bay Anglers' Club (centre) would simply be moved forward to the new shoreline. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Waterfront Remodelling Plan Backed by Anderson

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce proposal that container shipping facilities be built here is a step in the right direction, says Esquimalt Liberal MP David Anderson.

Referring to the Chamber's proposal that the outer wharf area be expanded and geared to handle containers, Mr. Anderson said "we will never be a major container port, but we have to be able to handle containers which will be turning up here."

"I'm very happy the Chamber of Commerce is taking an interest in this," he added. "It can count on my support."

Earlier this week George Farmer, chairman of the Chamber's harbor and transportation group, recommended that part of the shallow bay between Ogden Point docks and the Victoria Machinery Depot on Dallas Road be filled in and the whole area turned into a containerized shipping facility.

"There's enough rock and suitable waste around here to fill the bay in," he said. "For example when a building is pulled down there's no place to dump the waste. The bay would be a good dump for rubble."

Mr. Farmer said filling in the bay would reduce the unsightliness of the area, it would provide the city with additional land and would probably attract more private industry to the area.

"Before you can interest industry you must have facilities and land available," he said. "But it's up to the federal government to get in and spend some money before anyone will be interested."

Mr. Anderson agreed that the government should spend some money on the outer wharf area he said before any large projects are undertaken, existing wharfage facilities should be improved.

"The first step is to get the government or CNR to undertake the $200,000 expenditure to dredge along the dock to bring it down from 28 to 34 feet," he said.

"Secondly, the dock should be raised. It's not an all weather facility — you can't load lumber at all times.

"Before we get into massive projects this would be a first step."

He said he and Victoria Liberal MP David Groos had been pushing for wharfage improvements, but until now their campaign lacked local support.

"I'm certainly in favor of Mr. Farmer's view on this," he said. "We haven't had this type of support before. Until now it's all been very hypothetical."

FOREIGN POP MUSIC CURTAILED

MADRID (Reuters) — The Spanish government, in an effort to curtail foreign pop music here, has ordered radio and television stations to fill 50 per cent of their music broadcasts with selections from Spanish or Latin American composers.

The measures, to take effect in March, will cover state radio and television and dozens of commercial stations that broadcast many records by American, British and other foreign performers.

The information ministry said that by July, 75 per cent of all pop songs must be broadcast in Spanish and 10 per cent of all broadcasting time must be devoted to classical music.

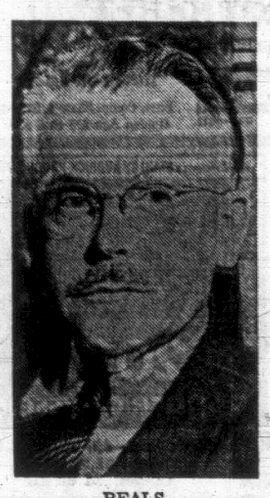

PET RESCUE KILLS CHILD

ST. LAMBERT DE LEVIS, Que. (CP) — Eight-year-old Caroline Roy, attempting to save her pet kittens, was killed Saturday when she rushed back into her burning home in this community 15 miles southeast of Quebec City.

The girl had been living in the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Morin, since her mother died several years ago.

SAGAS RECAPTURED

Giant Comet Leaves Geographic Memorial

BEALS
. . . editor

Did a huge meteorite crash into earth thousands of years ago and hollow out the giant crater that now forms Hudson Bay?

The question is discussed in a two-volume book edited by Dr. Carlyle S. Beals, retired Dominion Astronomer and formerly of Victoria.

From 1927 to 1947, Dr. Beals was an internationally-known astronomer at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Little Saanich Mountain. He was Dominion Astronomer in Ottawa from 1947 to 1964.

The book he has edited—Science, History and Hudson Bay—is published by the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

In a forward, the book says:

POSES QUESTIONS

"Ever since the day, 350 years ago, when British explorer Henry Hudson was cast adrift to perish in the great bay named after him, men of imagination have pondered the many questions posed by this forbidding body of water.

"Gradually, with advances in technology, some secrets of the Bay and the bleak land around it are coming to light, but much still remains hidden beneath its cold waters, in the mud of its great tidal flats, and on its inhospitable shores."

"From historical records and from explorations as recent as 1966, the writers featured in these volumes have compiled a fascinating composite picture of the Hudson Bay, together with exciting new theories of its ancient origin.

"Recaptured here are the sagas of the early explorers; the origin of the earliest inhabitants and the wild life, fish, birds and insects are described in detail."

A native of Nova Scotia, Dr. Beals came to Victoria in 1927 from the astrophysical laboratory of the Royal College of Science, London, England.

In 1934 he was awarded a doctor of science degree by London University for a thesis on his observation of the Wolf Rayet Stars, named after two men who first called attention to their peculiar nature.

Angry Dancer Fires Up

DETROIT—Police are searching for an arsonist who witnesses said tossed gasoline on a stairway in a crowded Detroit dance hall Sunday and lit it because he was angry over being refused admission. Some 60 persons were injured.

"All I saw was a ball of flame go up the steps," said James More, 33, one of some 150 persons who were in the second-floor hall on the city's West Side. Fire, smoke and panic quickly spread through the crowd.

Police said they had a good description of the fire bomber, who was turned away from the dance hall at about 2 a.m. Sunday because he appeared to be drunk.

About 15 minutes later, police said, the man returned with four friends, tossed gasoline from a can into the entranceway to the second floor and then threw in a match.

Witnesses said the flames roared up the narrow enclosed stairway and a cloud of dense smoke engulfed the dancers.

"It was so smoky, you could only see if you stooped over," said William Murray, 21, who was in the crowd.

"About five people tried to kick out the front windows but finally somebody had to throw a chair through," he said.

One girl, he added, simply spread out her arms and jumped 20 feet to the sidewalk. A man with his body enveloped in flames rushed out onto the dance floor, where other dancers smothered the fire.

FOLD GISHES ARE STUDIED

SAN ANTONIO, Texas—Drunk goldfish that live in lakes of liquor may hold a key to explaining man's behavior under the influence. As part of a $67,000 research project, Dr. Irving Geller of the Southwest Foundation for Research and Education, is studying the way his fish react while swimming in booze.

Salty Mariner Rhymes Saga of Lone Voyage

ST. THOMAS — A Newfoundland skipper who sailed a battered, 32-foot ketch into the harbor of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands on New Year's Day —after a solo Alantic crossing —is trying to decide what to do next.

Meanwhile, 50-year-old captain Tom Dower of St. John's is busy fixing the rigging of his ketch Newfoundlander. When the boat reached this scenic Virgin Island port it had two broken mast tips—the result of a mishap on the high seas with a well-meaning Japanese freighter.

Dower told a reporter for the St. Thomas Daily News the Japanese freighter had pulled alongside to give him some supplies — including badly needed fresh water.

But a high wave slapped the two vessels together smashing the mast tips of the Newfoundlander.

The newspaper says Dower reached the Virgin Islands a full 2½ months after leaving Newfoundland for St. Thomas—via the Canary Islands on the other side of the Atlantic.

MADE TRIP BEFORE

The veteran boatsman had made the same trip once before, and on that occasion the voyage took just 49 days.

Dower was in the Royal Navy during the Second World War and has logged years of seagoing experience in the merchant marine.

These cruises seem to have given him a confidence that even a storm cannot shake.

Dower says that during one of the numerous gales that buffeted his ketch while en route to St. Thomas, he felt so relaxed that he stretched out on the deck and composed a poem.

The 14-verse poem ends with a line that echoes the quiet philosphy of many a man who braves the sea alone.

"Where a man will reach out in the darkness alone, and feel there the hand of God."

Trudeau Invited

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau has accepted an invitation from Mrs. Indira Gandhi to visit India, Commonwealth sources reported Monday.

Protein Diet Reduces Eye Diseases

TORONTO (CP) — Eye diseases, common among most Canadians, are rare among Indians and Eskimos of the Far North because of their traditional high-protein diet, the Royal Canadian Institute was told here.

Dr. Elizabeth Cass, who has worked in the Northwest Territories for 11 years, said Indians and Eskimos have naturally good eyesight with little short sightedness among those living on the normal fish and meat diets.

When children go south and start eating the white man's high carbohydrate diets, they often begin to develop short sightedness. But they revert to normal when they return home to their native food, she said.

Dr. Cass said research among these people before their primitive way of life has changed could provide clues about preventing some of these diseases.

The English-born eye surgeon operates on patients at hospitals in Hay River, Fort Smith, Yellowknife and Inuvik.

She said that when she went to the territories in 1958, originally for a three-week stay, she found an appalling blindness rate of about 14 persons per 1,000. This compares with only one in 10,000 in the rest of North America.

She said accidents, cataracts, and tuberculosis are the most common causes of blindness there. But she said the rate has been cut in half because of more treatment and programs of tuberculosis control.

Dr. Cass's practice in the District of Mackenzie covers 1,250,000 square miles of barren country which she travels by plane, boat, dog team and snowmobile.

She says she has learned enough Eskimo and several Indian languages to examine and treat her patients.

Right Remedy For N.Z.

By J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand enters this election year in far better shape than seemed likely not many months ago.

The National party government, in office since 1960, faces a general election, probably in November. Battling a recession for most of its three-year term, it had been written off as unlikely to win a further period of office. Now the outlook has markedly changed.

In the 1966 election, National won 44 seats in the 80-seat House of Representatives, Labor 35, and Social Credit one. At byelections since then, National has lost one seat to Labor, so that its majority over the other parties now is six.

The government lost popularity when a steep drop in foreign exchange reserves and inflationary trends compelled a long series of emergency measures. A tight credit squeeze was followed by higher taxes, exchange restrictions and a 20-per-cent devaluation in the New Zealand dollar.

UNEMPLOYMENT UP

During 1968 unemployment rose to more than 8,000, the highest figure since the Second World War, though still at less than one per cent of the work force, low by world standards.

The last few months have seen a striking recovery.

Returns for both wool and meat have improved and the country's first steel mill began operations toward the end of the year.

A fine Christmas present was news in late December that an American - British - Australian-Japanese consortium would definitely establish a big aluminum smelter in the far south, using abundant low-cost electricity from a major hydroelectric development there. The project had been under negotiation for eight years and often seemed unlikely to come to fruition.

The balance of payments bounded back from a big deficit in the previous year to a healthy surplus. Unemployment dropped to less than 5,000.

IMPOSED RESTRAINTS

Business suddenly became so optimistic that the government found it necessary in December to impose minor new restraints to dampen down over-exuberance and forestall a new bout of inflation. But the general outlook remains more cheerful than for some years.

Riding the crest of the wave of recovery is Finance Minister R. D. Muldoon, whose handling of the economy during a difficult period is acknowledged to have been remarkably sure and efficient.

A 47-year-old accountant who has held the finance portfolio for less than two years, Muldoon is frank, blunt, outspoken, incisive. From the outset he showed a grasp of his job.

National party confidence has returned with the upturn in the economy and the party now is far more optimistic about its electoral prospects.

In such circumstances Muldoon's claims to become heir to Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake, now aged 64, would be almost irresistible.

Uvic Professor Will Research Mock Suicides

Dr. Melvyn Faber will spend next summer in the British Museum in London studying suicide on the English stage.

An assistant professor of English at the University of Victoria, Dr. Faber has received a $2,490 Canada Council grant to support his work.

He is interested in the history of suicidal conduct in drama from the time of the Greeks and will concentrate on the British theatre with his grant.

The council this week turned over more than $455,000 in research grants in the social sciences and humanities. Dr. Faber was the only Victoria researcher to receive money.

Russian Movie Boasts Real Spies

By LIONEL CHARLES
London Express

MOSCOW — Kremlin master spy Gordon Lonsdale, the brain behind the Portland spy ring, has turned up as the hero of a new Russian film which lifts the lid off Soviet espionage activities in the West.

Much of the fiom, called "The Dead Season," takes place in a country which remains unnamed. But it is clearly intended to be Britain.

There are shots in the London Underground, in Piccadilly and Leicester Square. Names of all major characters are English, including a barmaid named Lizzie.

The hero of the firm, which could be a Soviet box-office success, with its mixture of spies, secrets and even a touch of sex, is Russian agent Konstantine Ladeinikov, who uses the name Lonsfield.

On top of this, the Lonsfield of the film runs a jukebox firm as a cover — exactly as Lonsdale did when he operated in London.

In real life, Lonsdale spied against the Under-Water Research Establishment at Portland. Although jailed for 21 years together with Peter and Helen Kroger and two British traitors he was exchanged in 1964 for British agent Greville Wynne.

Much of the action is reminiscent of episodes described in Lonsdale's memoirs, which came out in Britain after a London publisher contacted him in Moscow.

ADVISED PRODUCERS

Londsale said at the time that the book would be published in Russia too. It has not yet appeared, but the former spy obviously gave first-hand advice to the film makers.

Also appearing in "The Dead Season" in Rudolf Abel, Soviet agent caught by the Americans and exchanged for U-2 pilot Gary Powers.

In an introduction Abel says the film is based on real life. But the irony is that the ordinary Russian, who has never heard of Lonsdale because the case was never reported here, cannont understand how close to real life it is.

Bonita Outlives Movie Brat Role

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK — Some child actors are ruined for life by the precocious demands their careers make upon them before they reach maturity.

But that didn't happen to Bonita Granville, the movie brat whom film audiences a generation ago loved to hate.

Today she is happily married to Jack Wrather, millionaire rancher, oilman and entertainment entrepreneur, and keeps her hand in show business by working as assistant producer on his CBS television show, Lassie.

Bonita, born in New York City, is the daughter of the late Bernard Granville, a Ziegfeld Follies star, and Rosina Timponi Granville, also a well-known stage performer.

"My father was one of the first Broadway musical stars to earn $5,000 a week," she recalled.

Her own acting career started at the age of seven when she went to Hollywood in 1931 and almost immediately was signed to appear in Westward Passage, starring Ann Harding and a then obscure British actor, Laurence Olivier.

One of the early highlights of her career was These Three, in which she played a hateful brat so successfully that for a few years she was saddled with a series of such unsympathetic roles.

IMAGE CHANGED

As she graduated, however, from child star to ingenue to dramatic actress she was given more ingratiating roles in such films as The Plough and the Stars, Ah, Wilderness, Cavalcade, and H. M. Pulham, Esq.

Altogether she appeared in 55 films.

Educated largely within studio walls, she was raised strictly by her mother—her father died when she was 13—and never had a date until she was 17.

"The work left me with no scars that I know of now," she said, smiling. "Maybe they'll creep up on me later."

She and her husband met on a blind date in 1946 and he proposed 10 days later, but she kept Wrather waiting 10 months before accepting his proposal.

"I quit acting before we were married," Bonita said. "You have to make a decision. You have to give up something, and I decided I'd better give up acting. I wanted to be married only once in my life, and I decided that was the thing to work at."

The couple has two children, Linda, 19, and Christopher, 17.

In her work on the Lassie show, Mrs. Wrather assists producer Robert Golden in selecting story material, casting, and wardrobe problems.

"Now and then I act in a scene," she said, "but I don't take any screen credits. I have no desire to return to fulltime acting. For one thing, I'm out of practice; for another thing, I'm too happy being a wife. Jack and I have a wonderful life."

THE BROTHERHOOD
Victoria Premiere
Capitol Theatre

This is a tragedy in the Greek sense; the tale of two brothers caught in a web of fate that is bound up with their underworld heritage.

It was produced by Kirk Douglas, who also plays the central role, and offers some interesting insights into the brutal yet integral codes of the Mafia.

Alex Cord arrives in Palermo, Sicily, for a reunion with his elder brother, Kirk Douglas, a fugitive gangster from the United States.

There is a flssh-back to a gay Sicilian-American wedding in New York. Alex Cord is marrying Susan Strasberg, the daughter of a gangster.

Eduardo Ciannelli, head of the old Mafia, and his cronies are among the wedding guests. There, too, are members of the so-called New York Syndicate — a cold ruthless organization operated by Irish and Jewish mobsters who have muscled into the Mafia operations.

The happy family dinners, the joyful wedding, the intimate glimpses of home life are effectively contrasted with the vengeful killings perpetrated by the Mafia.

Kirk Douglas is seen in one of his most penetrating roles — steely, ruthless and hypocritical as a Mafia man; tender, warm and loving as husband, father and brother.

Veteran actor Eduardo Ciannelli is outstanding as the deposed head of the old Mafia; Alex Cord is effective as the ambious younger brother; Irene Papas and Susan Strasberg are good in their supporting roles.

Most of the filming for this incisive study of an underworld society was done in Sicily. Direction and photography are above average and there is a background musical score by Lalo Schifrin which accents the mood of impending doom.

ISRAELI actress Helena Ronee, 19, is the newest James Bond girl. The film On Her Majesty's Service is being filmed in Switzerland. Helena was born in Germany.

Ship Strikes Reef But Who Cares?

MIAMI (AP)—The 471 passengers danced, sipped drinks and lounged on the sun-splashed decks of the British cruise ship Carmania Monday, not caring that the vessel was stuck high and dry on a Bahamian reef.

That's the way staff officer Peter Ekson described the situation aboard his 22,600-ton ship, owned by the Cunard Lines.

"Everyone is carrying on the way they usually do," Ekson said in a ship-to-shore conversation. "They're all very cheerful. We have plenty of everything."

Only 18 hours after starting a 12-day Caribbean cruise from Florida, the Carmania made a landfall at roughly the same spot Christopher Columbus did in 1492 when he thought he was in the Orient.

Public Pool Lures Nudes

LONDON (UPI)—Men, women and children are frolicking in the nude in the public swimming pool at the London suburb of Croydon.

The town council said it has given permission to a nudist club to use the indoors pool on Wednesday nights. Security men guard the doors and only the lifeguard wears trunks.

Divorce Failed To Work

LONDON — The Sultan of Zanzibar, whose word was law on his African island until he was overthrown by a revolution five years ago, is being sued for non-support by his wife.

A London High Court is hearing the lawsuit, which began when the sultan, 38, summoned his lissome, 28-year-old wife, Princess Anisa, and declared three times in Moslem fashion: "I divorce thee."

Not only did the attempted divorce fail to work, but Princess Anisa took him to court for non-support.

SNOW STALLS GETAWAY CAR

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two bandits Monday overlooked one matter when they planned their holdup of a city bank—the weather.

Armed with guns, they took an unspecified amount of money from a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

But when they tried to make their getaway their car became stuck in snow in a parking lot. One bandit was forced to jump out and push the getaway car.

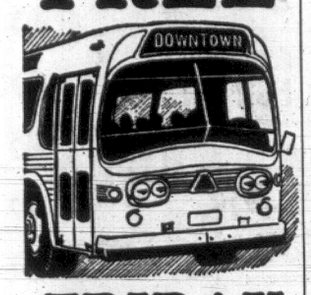

Police later arrested two suspects.

'JETHRO' ARRESTED

NORTH HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Actor Max Baer, 31, was arrested on an assault charge after a couple said he threatened them with a shotgun Saturday night.

Baer, son of late heavyweight boxing champion Max Baer, plays "Jethro" on "The Beverly Hillbillies" television series. He was released on $1,875 bond.

Where Are the Robins?

By HILDA BEASTALL

There must be a reason why so many berries still remain on our ornamental trees and shrubs. So far no solution has come to my wondering on this subject.

Hilda

In October, for a few days, it appeared that not one berry would survive the furious onslaught of starlings and robins.

Starlings arrived by the hundred, and to protect their staked claims to winter supplies the robins began eating.

If it hadn't been a stark example of a fight for survival it was funny to see the robins literally stuffing themselves beyond capacity in order to prevent the starlings from devouring what should have been exclusively robin preserves.

The robins sat around on hawthorn, hollies and cotoneasters, scarcely waiting for their crops to empty before filling their beaks again. We could see them with berries in beaks, unable to swallow.

All this time, starlings were consuming berries from any branch which robins couldd't manage hold against them.

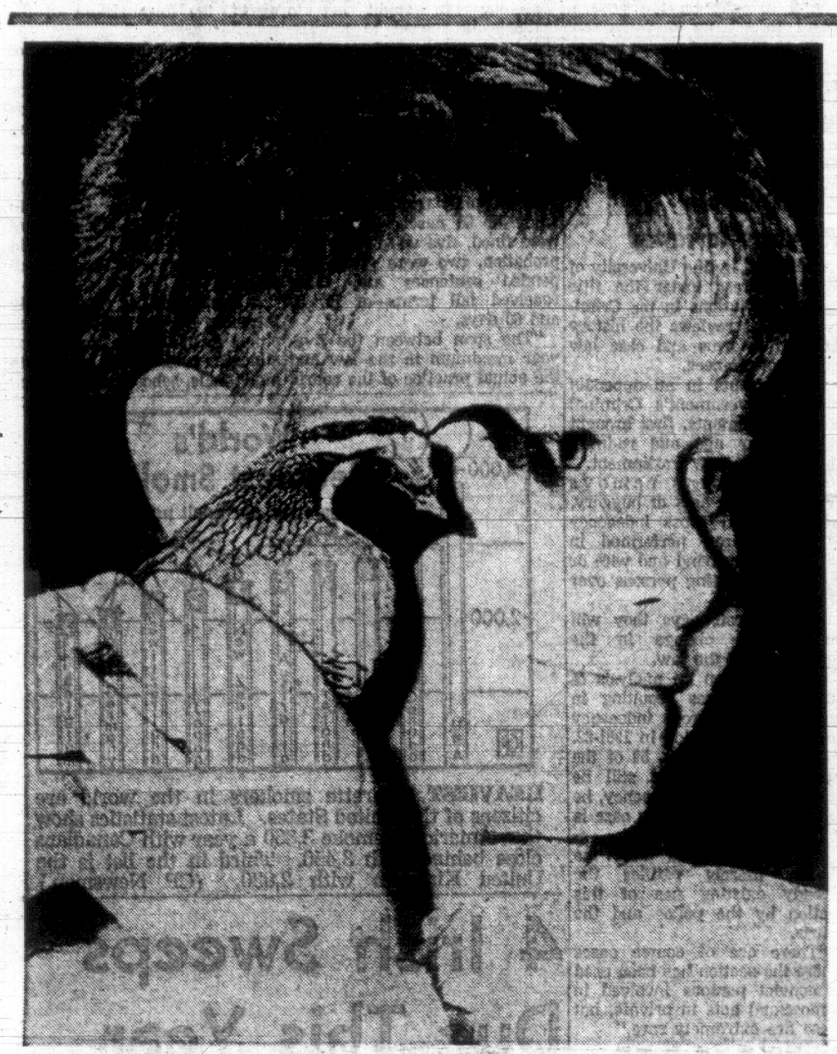

However, the starling hordes passed on, and because of the bounteous crop of food, many berries remained.

During the snow and frost period, we missed robins around here, and the berries are still in good firm condition.

Why they have remained on the shrubs through frost and snow, and what became of our normal winter robin population is a mystery to me.

Perhaps it is no mystery to readers. There may be an explanation gleaned from past experiences and records, or perhaps a theory or two for working on.

A flock or two of starlings have been encountered in other parts of the city recently. But robins? Where are they?

QUIVERING time for a quail. Doug Baker, 11, holds a quail which flew into the Baker home in Seattle during the recent cold spell. "He was so cold he sat down on the heat register and made himself at home," said Doug. He named the bird Snoopy and it plays with the two dogs and eats oatmeal and birdseed.

Youth Decides It's Time To Pen His Autobiography

NEW SHREWSBURY, N.J. (AP) — Arthur Bryan Cooper, who has led a busy life, has decided it is high time he wrote his autobiography. Arthur is 15 years old.

The high point of Arthur's career came when a paper he wrote was one of 15 chosen, out of 1,300 submitted, to be read at the recent 12th General Assembly of the International Geographical Union in New Delhi.

Thinking it over on the return flight from India the high school junior decided he should produce his life story while the facts are fresh in mind.

"He told me," said the boy's father, a businessman, "that he will start the story when he was 12 years old and became a member of the National Geographic Society."

Arthur, a bespectacled straight-A student with an IQ of 176, is basically a geography buff, but has other interests.

He plays soccer, basketball and tennis, swims expertly and has been an Eagle Scout since he was 15.

"He also corresponds with a couple of girls, although he doesn't tell us much about that," said his father.

The paper Arthur submitted to the International Geographical Union was a treatise on the contributions early religious travellers made to Western knowledge about Asia.

The other scholars were astonished when a 15-year-old boy stood up to read it.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Short, Warm Winters Even in Early Days

By BOB BOWMAN

People who enjoy winter sports often complain that Canadian winters are not like they used to be. The weather seems to be getting warmer, and the snow doesn't last for long.

Bowman

They should look back to 1671 when Quebec did not get any real snow until Jan. 14 and it was practically gone by the middle of March.

Of course it wasn't a typical winter, but it happened even in those days.

The short winter was not a blessing. People needed a long period of cold weather to keep their food from spoiling after it had been stored in the autumn. Snow was also helpful for travel.

One hundred years later, Lieutenant Governor Simcoe was able to cover a large part of Upper Canada by travelling in a sleigh throughout country in which there were no roads.

However, the weather may be getting slightly warmer. Studies made in Edmonton in 1958 indicated that the average temperature across Canada has risen two degrees since 1918.

Warm and cold weather seems to run in cycles. The weather was warmer than usual between 1929 and 1939, but colder between 1939 and 1943. From 1943 to 1952 it was warmer east of Port Arthur-Fort William, but colder west of there.

The coldest winter in Toronto was 1875 when the average temperature during February was 9.5 degrees. Toronto had the warmest winter on record in 1953 when the average temperature in February was 30.6 degrees. In 1878 the Red and Assiniboine Rivers in Winnipeg did not freeze until the end of November.

Averages can change very quickly. In 1954 southern Ontario was having the most dry summer on record when Hurricane Hazel dumped eight inches of rain in a few hours and caused a great deal of damage.

It's still true that nobody can be sure about the weather, horse races, or elections.

Other events on Jan. 14:

1588—LaJaunaye and Nouel obtained monopoly of fur trade along the St. Lawrence for 12 years and undertook to bring 60 convicts to Canada as settlers.

1645—Comany of New France transferred trading right to Company of Habitants made up of colonists in Canada.

1875—First issue of Halifax Herald. There was serious rioting in New Brunswick over new regulations for education.

1902—Supreme Court upheld Prince Edward Island prohibition act.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prize? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive wurthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Timothy Morrow, age 7, of Dimondale, Michigan, for his question:

What is a shock wave?

One of the most commonly encountered shock waves literally explodes like a bolt from the blue.

It happens when a high-flying plane bursts through the sound barrier. People on the ground hear this event like a crashing peal of thunder. Sometimes this shock wave is strong enough to shove its fist through a few window panes. We look up, expecting to see a thunderhead, but maybe there isn't a cloud in the sky. And the plane that struck the thundering bolt from the blue is almost out of sight. We got a shock—no doubt about it. But to understand the wave part of the shock wave we must know a few things about how the air moves—and more especially how it does not move.

We are so used to living with air all around us that we do not notice it. But the filmy stuff is made of tiny particles of matter called molecules. When you walk, you push your way through them. When you move an arm, you shove zillions of them aside. An electric fan whizzes streaming currents of molecules around the room. We cannot see the tiny gas particles in action. But in some ways they move like water, and we can see how water moves.

Ships may help you to understand a shock wave. Imagine a slow ship sailing through calm seas. Its nose pushes smoothly through the water. Currents of water stream smoothly backward along its sides. Then comes a storm. Tossing waves pitch and toss the ship—up and down, from side to side. Planes move the air somewhat as boats move the water. But the air currents of a shock wave are caused by the speed of a plane—and not by the weather.

Air Piles Up

An ordinary plane pushes through the air somewhat like a lazy ship on a calm ocean. Air currents stream smoothly back from its nose toward its tail. Now suppose the plane flies faster, as fast as the sound of a thunderclap travels through the air. This is about 760 miles per hour. Now the air molecules cannot get out of the way fast enough to let the plane slide smoothly through. They pile up in front of the plane in dense masses, almost like a wall. But the mighty engines thrust through this barrier like a fist. Now we get shock waves.

The barrier is shattered and the air molecules cannot stream backward in smooth waves. They form shock waves like fierce little fists that bash and buffet the plane from all directions. Since this is the speed of sound, they also roar with a clap of thunder. The sound travels on and often lives long enough to reach the ground and shout in your ear.

Now think of a fast speedboat with its powerful engines thrusting through the water. Tossing waves do not bother it and smooth V-shaped currents of water stream back from its nose. After a supersonic plane crashes through the first barrier, the shock waves change. The plane acts somewhat like a fast speedboat. The air keeps piling up ahead and the plane keeps thrusting through it. But smooth, V-shaped shock waves now stream back from its nose, its wings and its tail. The buffeting stops when the plane first crashes through the barrier.

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Gary Vance, age 13, of Enid, Oklahoma, for his question:

How did the animal species get their names?

Mankind started naming the animals almost as soon as he learned to talk. They were common, everyday names and they were different in every language. When scientists of different languages met to compare notes, these common names were confusing. In the 1700s, this problem was solved by a Swedish naturalist named Carolus Linnaeus. He classified the plant and then the animal kingdom into neat and orderly systems. To name the various groups and separate species he used words from Greek or Latin. These old languages were no longer alive and changing—yet they were studied by scholars of every country.

Linnaeus chose meaningful words to name his categories. The Phylum Arthropoda is coined from older words that mean the jointed-foot creatures. The Class Insects, for the insects, comes from words meaning "cut-in-two," referring to divided bodies of these creatures. The butterfly Order Lepidoptera means scaly wings. There are smaller family groups and still smaller genus groups. Finally comes the species classification which in the butterfly world for example separates the admiral butterflies from the monarchs.

Judy's Memoirs Stir Ripples Among Cohorts

OTTAWA (CP) — Ripples of reaction to former state secretary Judy LaMarsh's published memoirs continued to spread Monday from ministers past and present.

Reached in interviews here and elsewhere, they came up with these comments to the book which is entitled Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage.

(A serial, 3rd version, of the book is being published in the weekend edition of the Times.)

Robert Winters, former trade minister: "What divine right does she have to pass judgment on her colleagues? That's up to the people of Canada to decide."

"I have my own views of people who comment on their colleagues and it's not very high."

As for Miss LaMarsh's printed observation that he had little understanding of modern government, he replied that "she probably relates that to the tendency of some people to spending money the country can't afford."

CALLS HER BUZZSAW

Jack Pickersgill, former transport minister, said he is reluctant to "argue with a buzzsaw." He expected to obtain a copy of the book shortly.

"No doubt I'll read all the parts relating to me very quickly. I would prefer to reserve my comments until I have read the book as she herself has suggested her former collagues should.

"I'd like her to know I'm still in sufficient terror of her to do what I'm told."

Justice Minister John Turner offered a "no comment" and added "Why sell her book?"

TORONTO — Television actor Lorne Greene said Monday that he told Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of state, about kickbacks in the CBC, although he had no direct knowledge of them himself.

In a telephone interview from California, Greene, star of the TV series Bonanza, said the practice is widespread in all networks.

"Anybody in a position of buying film for a TV station often receives favors in return for buying the film from a particular company," he said.

In a television interview Friday, Miss LaMarsh said she once commissioned a management report on the CBC that contained the information there were "kickback situations" in the corporation and that the CBC was paying more money for dumped American film than the private network.

Commenting on the statements, Ron Frazer, vice-president of corporate affairs for the CBC, said if "Judy LaMarsh or anyone else has facts and names, let us have them and we promise we will look into it."

Changes in Sex Laws Termed Insignificant

By CARMAN CUMMING

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposed changes in the criminal law on sexual offences will make little change in practice, says a study published just before the opening of parliamentary debate on the issue.

The study by Toronto lawyer Alex K. Gigeroff, 37, prepared over several years for the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry, argues that the changes don't go far enough and in some cases retain concepts out of the middle ages.

Specifically, it contends that the term "gross indecency" used to cover homosexual and other acts is vague, and is used to prosecute widely differing offences.

And it calls on the government to set up a permanent body to plan systematic reform of criminal law, basing changes on data from actual cases.

The study is based on work done by a Clarke Institute research group, including Mr. Gigeroff, which has been examining sexual behavior, society and the law.

Reforms Reviewed

Published by the University of Toronto Press under the title Sexual Deviations in the Criminal Law, it reviews the history of legal reforms and case law on sexual offences.

It comments in an appendix on the government's Criminal Code amendments, first brought out a year ago and re-introduced in the new Parliament.

The amendments remove from the code acts of buggery, bestiality and gross indecency when they are performed in private by husband and wife or by two consenting persons over the age of 21.

Mr. Gigeroff says they will mean little change in the application of the law.

He reports on an analysis of 60 Toronto cases resulting in conviction for gross indecency in a 12-month period in 1961-62.

Under the changes, 59 of the people involved could still be convicted of gross indecency, he says, and the remaining case is doubtful.

"It can be said that the change merely ratifies the already existing use of this section by the police and the courts.

"There are of course cases where the section has been used to convict persons involved in homosexual acts in private, but these are extremely rare."

Still Significant

The change still is significant, Mr. Gigeroff says, because it eliminates from the law private sexual behavior which "theoretically was a crime, but in reality, was not charged by the police or convicted by the courts."

More importantly, it might open up this area of law for discussion and education.

But it did not go far enough in reforming or clarifying the existing law.

"Without ever spelling out clearly what gross indecency means, without ever specifying what behavior it was intended to control, without ever defining the terms, it is proposed that this unknown shall not be applicable to certain classes of people in certain situations. 'Gross indecency' is still as vague a formulation as it ever was."

If it is accepted that private sexual behavior is a moral rather than a legal question, Mr. Gigeroff says, "then we must be quite clear about the reason for retaining the law which would apply to the remaining cases, virtually all the cases which are tried now."

"If the reason for retaining the law is not founded in morality, then what is the justification for it? What is it we are trying to prevent or protect? What is it we object to and why?"

Mostly Homosexual

Most court cases arise from homosexual acts between consenting adults in public places, he says.

"From certain perspectives the acts may be regarded as immoral, but if it is accepted that the law ought not to legislate in regard to morals, then are there other grounds which justify a proscription in these cases?"

Mr. Gigeroff also questions retention of the maximum five-year jail term for gross indecency.

In the 40 cases of homosexual acts in public examined in the study of 60 cases, 30 persons were fined, five were placed on probation, two were given suspended sentences and three received jail terms—of 10, 30 and 60 days.

"The span between the five-year maximum in the law and the actual practice of the courts appears to be unsuportable In such cases, and yet the proposal does not touch on this question.

"It may be that a five-year maximum is necessary where the offence involves a child or and adolescent, but this is a very good reason why we ought to distinguish between the different kinds of cases involved."

'Very Different' Acts

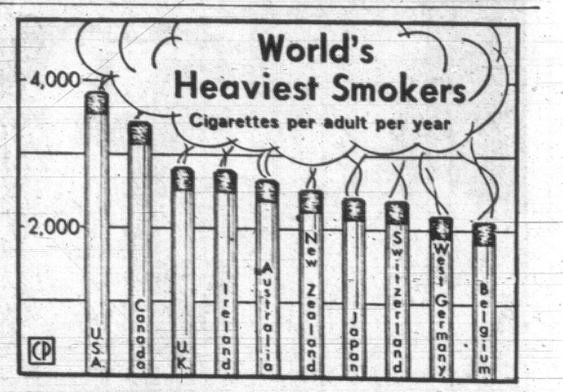

Mr. Gigeroff also argues that the offences of buggery and bestiality should be separated in the code.

"To continue including these two very different behavioral acts in one section, however elaborate we may allow the exclusion clauses to become, is to carry on into the future, once again, the formulations of the middle ages. . . ."

Reviewing the history of changes in law on sexual offences, Mr. Gigeroff says the last revision in 1953-54 was little more than a neater repackaging on an essentially 19th century product.

Legislators were "obviously uninformed of the issues involved, and where the spark of curiosity or criticism did flicker, they were poorly advised."

A permanent law reform body therefore is needed, he says, either to undertake research or allocate subjects of study to individuals, schools or institutes.

Complaint Salutes Arrival Of Alberta's Ombudsman

The arrival of North America's first ombudsman was breathlessly awaited by at least one disgruntled Victorian.

Former RCMP commissioner George McClellan, now Alberta's ombudsman, told the Canadian Club luncheon here Monday a complaint against Victoria City Hall was lodged with him not long after his arrival.

It was in his mail box at the Empress Hotel.

"I'll have to phone the lady this afternoon to tell her I can't handle her complaint," he told the luncheon.

He will explain to her his duties consist of handling grievances between Albertans and their government.

But Mr. McClellan said he was "deeply honored."

His appointment 18 months ago was an historic one: he was the first ombudsman to be appointed by a legislative body in North America.

Since then, New Brunswick has also named an ombudsman, Dr. W. T. R. Flemington.

"I've been called all kinds of names by persons on both sides of the law and on the other side of the House of Commons," he said, "but never in my wildest dreams did I expect to inherit the title of ombudsman."

He defined his new position as follows:

● The ombudsman is a private, non-partisan officer of the legislature;

● His duties consist in handling complaints brought forward by private citizens or groups who feel they have been unjustly dealt with by a particular department of the government;

● He also has the power to criticize and publicize what he considers to be improper administrative procedure, but he does not have the power to reverse decisions.

The word "ombudsman" is of Scandinavian origin, meaning "man with power to do good." Recent attempts to translate "ombudsman" into Hawaiian have resulted in "kola-kola," he said.

"So now we can say with certainty that things go better with kola-kola," he quipped.

CONSIDERABLE POWER

His power in dealing with the people of Alberta and their elected government is considerable. He is not responsible to any minister, and can obtain on demand any government file for inspection.

He can even obtain secret cabinet documents by a special order of the attorney-general's office.

"I've had far greater co-operation from the departments concerned than I ever thought I would."

He can interrogate any person in the province and issue a summons for any person to be brought before his office during the course of his investigations.

Mr. McClellan said between 50 and 60 per cent of the complaints he receives do not come under his jurisdiction. Those that do, however, usually concern such large administrative departments as the attorney-general's department and the department of social welfare.

He often finds complaints by citizens about the government can be quickly settled by direct communication between the parties concerned.

DRY FORMALITY

The dry formality of civil service correspondence, it turns out, is often a source of indignation and misunderstanding on the part of the complainants. Such grievances are usually quickly settled by the minister or one of his deputies.

"I have yet to run into any decision that was made with malice or intent to discredit," he said.

He said he has not been subject to any kind of political pressure.

He said people with a language problem and the semi-literate are the ones hardest hit by bureaucracy.

"It is those who don't know where to go and what tables to pound who get pushed around."

His investigation of a complaint begins when all ordinary avenues of appeal procedure have been followed by the complainant. Following his investigation he recommends what action should be taken by the minister of the department concerned.

'GREATEST WEAPON'

If the minister disagrees with the recommendation, the ombudsman can carry his recommendation to the cabinet, or even place it before the legislature, where it will be publicized by the news media.

"The ombudsman's greatest weapon is publicity," he concluded.

"It has been said that the ombudsman can only exist in a country that doesn't need him.

"For example, I would say that the people of Czechoslovakia aren't going to get anything like an ombudsman for many years to come."

Ordered for Duty

SASKATOON (CP) — Ernest Zepik, a Jehovah's Witness who refused to take the oath for jury duty, was ordered Monday to appear before Court of the Queen's Bench Wednesday after being cited for contempt of court. Mr. Zepik applied for exclusion earlier on the grounds he was a minister though he held a regular job. His appeal had been turned down.

4 Irish Sweeps Due This Year

DUBLIN (CP) — The Irish Hospitals' Sweepstakes, which annually operates a sweepstake on three major English and Irish horse races, will run a fourth sweeps this year.

The additional sweepstake race, for which rules have yet to be drawn up by Irish turf officials, will be a hurdle race Dec. 27 at Leopardstown, the famous Irish steeplechase course five miles from Dublin. The draw for this race, an additional fixture to the regular Leopardstown Christmas meeting, will take place Dec. 22.

The new race will be known as the Irish Sweeps Hurdle for sweepstake purposes. The others are dubbed the Irish Sweeps Lincoln, Irish Sweeps Derby and Irish Sweeps Cambridgeshire. It has been added to "fill the long gap" between the fall and spring fixtures, a spokesman for the Hospitals' Trust explained Monday.

Operating a sweep roughly every three months will make better use of staff and facilities at the trust's headquarters in suburban Ballsbridge, the spokesman added. The trust invests its own dividends in commercial enterprises making products ranging from plastics to costly Waterford crystal.

Since the sweepstake was founded in 1930 by a former Irish Republican Army rebel, a Welsh-born engineer and a Dublin bookmaker, it has paid out more than £195,000,000 ($507,000,000) in prize money and financed 410 Irish hospitals with £82,000,000 ($213,200,000).

Although ticket sales are illegal almost everywhere outside Ireland, a flourishing black market finds its way to 147 countries and territories.

Teachers Swap Marks for Dates

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — Investigations have started at the University of California into published charges that Italian department teachers swapped good marks for dates with girl students.

A report in the university newspaper (The Daily Bruin) charged that girl students who "co-operated" with male teaching assistants got good marks.

One girl who made an A in Italian told the newspaper, "I didn't deserve that grade."

The chairman of the Italian department, Franco Fido, said he began an investigation of the department immediately after the report appeared.

The Old Boys Have 'Nothing Else to Do'

By POB MITCHELL

This is a youth-oriented society, it is said, but despite everything the Canadian Club lives on—a venerable stronghold of another generation.

Any "youngster" of under 40 who might accidentally have walked into the Men's Canadian Club luncheon at the Empress Hotel Monday could not but be struck by the realization that he was in the midst of a spritely bastion of the 50-plus segment of society.

Some 200 men, most of them retired businessmen, were gathered there in the Georgian Lounge, as they dined heartily on roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, chatting cheerfully about the state of the nation, and pausing midway through the meal to raise glasses of water in a toast to the Queen.

They had come to hear former RCMP commissioner George McClellan's address on his work as ombudsman to the province of Alberta. But their table conversation was also worth hearing.

Take real estate.

The price of real estate in Quebec is falling, said a man from Montreal, and many families are leaving the province in the face of French-Canadian nationalism.

Someone wanted to know if there was any truth in the rumor that graduates from English-language universities in Quebec will soon be required to pass an examination in French before receiving their degrees.

VICTORIAN VICTORIAN

An old boy who first saw the light of day during the reign of Queen Victoria shook his head and chuckled:

"Shoulda made them all speak English right at the start, and we could've avoided all this mess."

"Well, that's where concessions get you," a colleague commiserated.

The conversation switched.

A visitor from Winnipeg recalled the days when as a young man he had donated his truck to the militia during the Winnipeg general strike of 1919.

A native of Victoria reminisced about an era when he had ridden in a buggy with his grandfather through Oak Bay while it was still open country.

A comment that the prime minister had been "cutting quite a figure" in London met with solemn nods.

"This meeting seems to be well attended," said the man from Winnipeg. "Do you always get such a good turnout in Victoria?"

"Well," someone said, "we're all in the same boat here—nothing else to do."

RIFLE-SHOOTING INDIAN SCATTERS PGE CREW

FORT ST. JAMES, B.C. (CP) — A lone Indian, armed with a rifle, confronted a Pacific Great Eastern Railway construction crew and ordered them to get off his land.

When they didn't, he started firing.

The men quickly scattered and nobody was injured.

August Joseph, a 28-year-old Tachie Indian band councillor Monday was sentenced to nine months in jail. He pleaded guilty before Magistrate Thomas H. Blackburn to possession of an offensive weapon.

According to evidence, Joseph told the construction gang: "This is my life and this is my blood. No longer will they take our land."

DELAYING TACTIC

He said he intended the action only as a delyaing tactic until trespassing signs could be posted.

The gang was working on a right-of-way for an extension to the government-owned PGE from Fort St. James to Takla Lake.

Band Chief Harry Pierre said nobody from PGE contacted him about the Indian land.

He said he was posting trespassing notices when a shot rang out. RCMP rushed to the scene, about 360 miles north of Vancouver.

Chief Pierre said his band still plans to protest PGE action.

He said: "There has been no deal. I understand they want 52 acres of our land. They are not going to take it. We will make a stand."

Thomas Graham, PGE supervisor in the area, said "there was a little misunderstanding."

Thieves Drop Loot Worth $7 Million

BOSSTON — Robbers stole $7,000,000 worth of cheques from the National Shawmut Bank Monday, then apparently dumped them beside a highway in suburban Revere.

The Revere police department quoted FBI agents as saying millions of dollars worth of the cheques were negotiable, but a bank spokesman denied this.

Detective Mike Casoli of the Revere police said that although the robbery apparently occurred about 4:30 a.m. Monday, local police were not informed of it until hours later.

Casoli said that the first word his department got of it was just after midnight Monday night after two Revere detectives, acting on an anonymous phone call, found the three crates full of cheques.

FBI agents picked up the cheques, Casoli said, and took them to the bank for an audit.

There was no confirmation from the FBI.

GIVE THEIR VERSION

Revere police said they understood the robbery happened this way:

Two guards were loading the cheques into one of the bank's panel trucks. The truck has special plating and other features, but does not resemble a regular armored car. The cheques were destined for the Federal Reserve Bank across the street, for distribution throughout the country.

Several men approached and in a manner not known took the three crates of cheques. The robbery occurred at the bank's main office on Post Office Square.

Quaife, Morton Clash Over 'Off-Limits' Well

CAMPBELL
. . . "get together"

NORTH COWICHAN — A shocked Mayor D. C. Morton today defended his city's water drilling operations inside the Duncan town limits in the wake of an angry attack by Duncan Mayor Jim Quaife.

Mayor Quaife lashed out in council Monday, saying North Cowichan's efforts to develop a well on residential property within 1,000 feet of one of the city's own wells takes "one hell of a lot of gall."

Mayor Morton replied in an interview that the drilling is merely to test for water and said his municipality had no intention of proceeding with the well without full approval of Duncan council.

But, he asked, "what's the good of submitting plans for a well if there's no water?"

Mayor Quaife told council: "I cannot imagine what made them go ahead without a word to anyone, and to think they want us to set up a joint water board with them."

"What a pity," said Mayor Morton, that the Duncan mayor had not contacted North Cowichan officials before launching his tirade.

Mayor Quaife said after the meeting that North Cowichan is "legally" within its rights to take an option on the privately-owned residential lot on Campbell Street.

He told council, however, "this is a very underhanded action and certainly destroys any attempt made to set up a better working relationship with our neighbor to the north."

Adding: "But they have just gone right ahead without a word to anyone in this office. They never applied for a licence or anything. I understand they have already drilled 50 feet."

It was "downright skullduggery."

Mayor Morton explained his municipality is short of water and an outside line to increase supply would have to cross the Cowichan River near where the test drilling is under way.

Before putting the line across, it seemed like a good idea to see if water is available on the near bank. So far none has been found.

Mayor Quaife was particularly incensed because the North Cowichan well, if successful, will "undoubtedly tap into our own underground supply."

It was like waiting until somebody drills an oil well and then drilling your well opposite them on their own land.

The mayor is also fuming because Duncan recently announced its intention to supply water beyond its boundaries.

A letter of protest has been mailed to Mayor Morton, he said.

'People Who Pay Own the Assets'

The assets of the Sidney and North Saanich fire departments belong to the taxpayers of the municipalities, Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell said Monday.

"The people who pay the shot own the assets," he told the joint North Saanich and Sidney fire committee at a meeting to discuss the fire department controversy.

Councils control the assets on behalf of the taxpayers, he said.

Ownership and control of the assets is an issue in the dispute.

The 22 members of the fire department have resigned because councils have refused to appoint Hugh Loney as a full-time chief and to give the department voting powers on the fire committee.

IN TRUST

They also claim control of the department on the grounds the assets are only held in trust by the two councils.

Pending a settlement, the firmen have agreed to continue to provide fire protection for the municipalities.

While the minister made it clear he felt control of the assets is a council responsibility, he said he is aware that there might be some legal technicalities challenging this point or in need of clarification.

He felt the two parties could iron out these points in committee.

"I would be prepared to ratify whatever agreement they came up with and if necessary put it in the form of legislation," he said.

George Aylard, chairman of the fire committee, said he has suggested to the volunteer force its legal adviser meet the municipal solicitor to discuss an agreement.

"The two legal advisers could work out an agreement satisfactory to both parties," he said. "This I feel should be the first step towards a settlement."

He said a meeting of the joint fire committee will be held Wednesday to review the situation.

Johnson Rites Wednesday

COURTENAY — A memorial service for Gerry Johnson, the 43-year-old Royston logging-boom foreman who died in Houston awaiting a heart transplant, will be held here Wednesday at 2 p.m.

Rev. Millard Alexadner of Courtenay United Church will officiate at the service in Piercy's Funeral Home.

Mr. Johnson's body was cremated in Houston. He died Friday shortly after tests had shown him a suitable heart recipient.

More than $4,000 was collected in the Comox Valley towards cost of the operation and his widow said Monday she would like to see the money put into a trust fund for future transplant patients.

"The way things are going, there is bound to be someone from the province or the Island undergoing a heart transplant before too long," she said.

"Whoever it is will need a lot of money."

Full Treatment In Sewage Plan

PENDER ISLAND—First application for a permit to discharge fully-treated sewage effluent into the sea has been made by Gulf Island Industries, Ltd., of Vancouver.

An official of the development company, James. King, said Monday the sewage system is the first fully-treated sewage proposal in any Gulf Island subdivision.

Several are now awaiting government action on Malaview Estates development on Salt Spring Island.

NO DANGER

The Pender system would provide for cutting up, settling and chlorination treatment. The effluent at this stage may be released into the sea without danger of pollution, Mr. King said.

There was considerable opposition here last year when Magic Lakes Estates of Vancouver gained permission to discharge partially-treated sewage into Swanson Channel.

The new project is in the same area as the Magic Lakes Estates development.

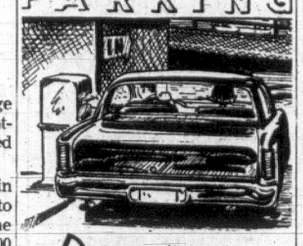

$1,076 Raised By Tree Lights

PENDER ISLAND — George Pearson's Christmas tree light-up campaign this year raised $1,076 for CARE of Canada.

Mr. Pearson announced in early December his goal was to reach $1,000 this year and the total acheived is nearly $200 over last year.

Each donation puts a light on the tree on his property. The money raised will ship 14½ tons of food for CARE of Canada, he said.

Bogged down with homework?

"Not since we learned to read three times faster," says happy Gerry family

"We were reading fairly quickly before we took the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics course," says the Gerry family. "But the heavy homework schedule still left us bogged down with too little time for ourselves. Now we read well over three times faster, and we actually find our course much more interesting." If you are bogged down with homework . . . in school or in business, Reading Dynamics may be the answer.

WHO HAS TAKEN THIS COURSE:
Over 400,000 throughout North America . . . over 400 in the Greater Victoria and Nanaimo area alone. This is the course President Kennedy asked his Joint Chiefs of Staff to take . . . the same course taken by over 10 Canadian Members of Parliament, and by thousands of students, workers, businessmen and housewives from coast to coast.

NO MECHANICAL AIDS—USE IT ANYWHERE!
Reading Dynamics is the world's most-wanted speed reading course because there's absolutely no special equipment needed. We teach you to see and understand words as never before, until your eye simply flies down the page, your hand acting as a pacer! And you are actually reading . . . not skimming!

ACHIEVEMENT WARRANTY
We guarantee to refund the entire tuition to any student who does not at least triple his reading efficiency.

'LAND WASTED' SAYS QUAIFE

Talks Set on Road Access

DUNCAN — A fact-finding committee composed of Duncan city and Cowichan Indian band members will meet later this week to discuss development of roads into a proposed industrial park on the reserve, Mayor Jim Quaife said Monday.

The area now has limited access and one company, Doman Industries Ltd., was located there, the mayor said.

"But the rest of the land is just lying there being wasted. We want to develop it and the band wants it developed."

HOTEL PLANNED

The land belongs to individual members of the Cowichan band. The area is bounded by the Trans-Canada Highway, Trunk Road, E and N Railway line and Cowichan Way West—a limited access road which has not been leased or dedicated to the city.

One of the proposed developments on the site is a $1 million hotel. Roads must be dedicated before even a building permit can be issued, the mayor said.

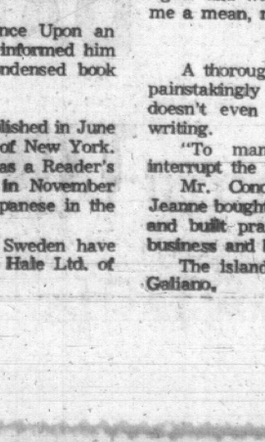

He envisaged a recreational area south to the Cowichan River which could be beautified and camping facilities, picnic sites or tourist stopoffs developed on it.

Indian housing and commercial developments are planned for a large area west of the railway tracks. Mayor Quaife said the road development will begin just as soon as the leases become available.

Woman Faces Drug Charge

PENTICTON (CP) — Carel Gibbs, 21, of Nanaimo, was remanded without plea to Jan. 27 when she appeared in magistrate's court Monday charged with possession of marijuana.

She was arrested Saturday night following an investigation carried out by local RCMP at the request of RCMP in Nanaimo.

PARKING VOTE JAN. 25

NANAIMO — To meet an expected doubling of demand over the next 10 years, city council Monday set Jan. 25 as the date for a $565,000 referendum to develop downtown parking.

The parking facilities bylaw, a year in the preparation by aldermen Gordon MacKay and Ted Jenkinson, calls for spending $183,000 for land acquisition and $382,000 for development.

The city hall polling station will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Council approved a bylaw allowing the city to borrow as much as $900,000 to finance municipal operations in the first six months of 1969.

'Too Many Well-Wishers And Cranks,' Says Author

By ED GOULD

WALLACE ISLAND — A book about establishing a business and home on an isolated Gulf of Georgia island has led to the largest sales ever of a Reader's Digest condensed book, the company has informed author David Conover.

Mr. Conover, author of Once Upon an Island, said the magazine has informed him that 2,500,000 copies of the condensed book are in print.

★ ★ ★

The book originally was published in June last year by Crown Publishing of New York.

It has also been picked up as a Reader's Guild selection for publication in November and is being translated into Japanese in the spring.

Switzerland, Germany and Sweden have editions planned, as do Robert Hale Ltd. of England.

Mr. Conover is working on a sequel to the best-seller and the recent heavy snowfall and power failures on the islands have done nothing to improve his isolation.

"The weather has robbed me of both lights and water," he said. "And it's made me a mean, miserable man."

★ ★ ★

A thorough researcher and a writer who painstakingly labors over every page, he doesn't even answer the phone when he's writing.

"To many well-wishers and cranks" interrupt the work.

Mr. Conover and his ex-model wife Jeanne bought 210-acre Wallace Island in 1946 and built practically single-handed a resort business and home on it.

The island lies between Salt Spring and Galiano.

Loffmark Loses Fight On Pollution Standards

NDP Holds Riding

Socred Vote Takes Plunge

VANCOUVER (CP) — The New Democratic Party swept to an easy poll-by-poll victory in the Burnaby-Willingdon provincial by-election Monday.

Jim Lorimer, 45-year-old Burnaby lawyer who had failed to win an aldermanic seat in the municipality's civic elections a month earlier, won the legislature seat in convincing fashion.

He headed the vote in 70 of the 72 polls, tied for the lead in the other two and piled up a vote almost equal to the combined vote of his three opponents.

The final count was Lorimer 4,728 votes; Dr. John Playfair, Social Credit, 2,529; Jim Clark, Liberal, 2,049, and Reg Grandison, Progressive Conservative, 232.

The result showed a marked swing to the NDP in the suburban Vancouver constituency since Fred Vulliamy wrested the seat from Social Credit by a 524-vote margin in the Sept. 12, 1966, general election. The seat became vacant with Mr. Vulliamy's death Oct. 20.

SIXTH SINCE 1966

Monday's byelection was the sixth in British Columbia since the 1966 election and left the standing in the 55-seat legislature at Social Credit 32, NDP 17, Liberal 6.

The 1969 session of the legislature opens Jan. 23 and the new member could take his seat four days later.

In the earlier byelections, Social Credit retained one seat and lost one to the NDP. New Democrat and Liberal members retained the other three ridings.

Monday's light vote—less than 40 per cent of the 24,210 eligible voters turned out—climaxed a campaign that produced few hard issues and a noticeable lack of public interest.

Education, housing, medical care and urban development formed common material for all candidates during the lacklustre campaign.

Although Premier W. A. C. Bennett's Social Credit administration retains a comfortable nine-seat majority in the legislature, the outcome of Monday's byelection was certain to spur NDP hopes of eventually ending the premier's long skein of general election victories, unbroken since he first took office in 1952.

And the NDP victory was equally certain to spur interest in the party's leadership convention scheduled here April 11.

'DECLINING FAITH'

Robert Strachan, the retiring NDP leader who announced last fall that he would step down this year, said Monday night he regarded the byelection result as an indication of the public's declining faith in the Social Credit party and government.

Premier Bennett was not available for comment but Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said the result showed B.C. is headed for a socialist government unless supporters of a free enterprise system stop splitting their vote.

Dr. Pat McGeer, provincial Liberal leader, also mentioned the possible splitting of the free enterprise vote.

"I hope those who supported Social Credit in the past will come to recognize this and rally to the Liberal party."

RIVIERA TOWN SMASHED BY CYCLONE

SESTRI LEVANTE—A cyclone twisting in from the sea swept across this Italian riviera town before dawn today causing one death and damage estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In a minute and a half of devastation, the cyclone carried light boats inland 200 yards from the sea, ripped roofs off houses, tore down trees, uprooted buses and knocked down two heavy cranes.

PLANE RIDES WAVES as it is towed to shore today after crashing into Pacific Ocean near Los Angeles International Airport Monday. At least 30 of 45 aboard were rescued. (Wirephoto.)

30 Saved From Sea After Plane Crashes

SENTENCED to 25 years in prison today in Britain was Bruce Reynolds, 38, last of the masked band that staged the $7,500,000 Great Train Robbery five years ago. (See story Page 2.)

LOS ANGELES (CP)—The Sverre Viking, a huge Scandinavian Airlines DC-8 jetliner flying the polar route, came down in the rainswept sea Monday night as it was heading for a landing at International Airport —and floated.

Coast guard officials called it a "miracle."

Of the 45 passengers and crew aboard, four were dead, 11 missing and 30 were saved. Many were injured.

The four-engined plane, on a polar flight from Copenhagen via Seattle, Wash., splashed amid two-foot swells eight miles off shore with, passengers said, no warning.

In a scene of pandemonium, those aboard scrambled into rubber boats or atop wings and fuselage. Some fell into the sea.

There were 36 passengers and nine crew members aboard the airliner.

An armada of small boats—coast guard cutters, life guard craft and a host of private yachts from the big Marina Del Rey harbor near the airport conducted a search-and-rescue operation that lasted for hours.

RACE SURVIVORS ASHORE

They plucked survivors from the waves, raced them ashore to ambulances that took them to hospitals, and in some cases went back to look for more.

Confusion about the number of survivors continued through the night because of small private craft without radios picking up passengers.

One of the bodies was brought ashore just before midnight in a Standard Oil Co. tug and the other three bodies were aboard a private vessel named El Segundo.

The plane was still afloat hours after the crash.

Due at 6:05 p.m. the jet circled in the airport landing pattern for some 90 minutes due to a bad weather stackup of planes, then began its approach. It vanished from the radar screen at 7:40.

Chief pilot Kenneth Davis, an Englishman living in Sweden, said he made a "routine approach except for some difficulty with the landing gear."

GIVES NO DETAILS

He declined to give details, but commended his crew and the passengers for "totally heroic and disciplined action" in evacuating the plane and launching rubber boats.

The floating was "a miracle" to one coast guardsman. Another called it "kind of miraculous" that the pilot "was able to keep the ship in one piece, landing in two-foot waves and darkness."

Olaff Andersson, 23, an off-duty SAS pilot from Copenhagen and on his honeymoon, was asleep when he felt what he thought was a "hard landing."

"I looked around and realized it was a little more. Seats were thrown all over the cabin. Water started to flood in.

"I was sitting right behind the emergency door over the wing. I opened it, put on a life preserver, and began hauling people out on the wing.

"Some children were screaming, but there really wasn't any panic. The rescue operation was very efficient.

"We got into a life raft but it had a hole and sank. We all jumped into the water and swam to a second raft."

Depot Ripped By Explosion

MONTREAL (CP)—An explosion and fire today ripped apart a concrete valve house at the east-end Calex Oil Co. storage depot.

One man was believed caught under the rubble and firemen were using power drills to dig through the ruins. Three men were taken to hospital with undetermined injuries.

Firemen brought the blaze under control within an hour, keeping flames from spreading to huge oil tanks nearby.

PM SKIPS EARLY TALKS

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau skipped the morning session of the Commonwealth conference today and stayed in his hotel suite working on domestic affairs.

Aides said he was dealing with a pile of government papers from Ottawa and also preparing for his Rome talks Thursday with the Pope and Italian political leaders.

It was the second time Trudeau had missed a conference session — the first was last Wednesday afternoon when he retired to bed with a touch of flu.

'Color Bar' Holds Spotlight

LONDON (CP-Reuters) — President Milton Obote of Uganda today accused Britain of devaluing its citizenship as a dispute blazed up over Commonwealth immigration.

The president, attending the 28-nation Commonwealth prime ministers conference, told reporters there now are two types of British citizen—white and colored.

The angry president announced that Uganda would continue to boycott all meetings of a special 17-nation group of conference officials dealing with immigration and citizenship problems. Delegates said Zambia, Tanzania and Kenya also were absent when the group held its second meeting this morning.

At the heart of the dispute lies the fate of thousands of East African Asians who hold British passports. As non-citizens they are being squeezed out of their businesses by new restrictive trade laws and Britain fears they may seek to come here en masse.

Obote said: "A white Briton who may be anywhere in the world can come here at any time—a colored Briton cannot."

Obote was asked what would happen if Britain refused to renew British passports held by 40,000 Asians in Uganda.

"If they fail to renew them I will have 40,000 ex-British citizens on my hands in Uganda," he said.

He said that although Uganda was boycotting the immigration working group, he would take part if the matter was discussed in the full conference.

WILL TRY AGAIN

Commonwealth officials planned to make fresh efforts to bring the East African states back into the immigration group but Kenya's economics minister, Tom Mboya, said Kenya wouldn't attend.

"We will stay out until Britain makes a firm statement fulfilling her pledge to the British passport holders in Kenya," Mboya said in an interview.

By British passport holders, he means the 40,000 Pakistanis and Indians in Kenya who decid-

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has lost his war against pollution within the cabinet.

His defeat became clear this morning in the wake of Monday afternoon's cabinet meeting when his battle with Resources Minister Ray Williston came to a head.

After the meeting, Mr. Loffmark reluctantly admitted his promised bombshell of province-wide air and water standards under health department control has been defused and turned over to Mr. Williston, whom conservationists have bitterly criticized as willing to pay the price of pollution for quick industrial development.

Mr. Williston this morning put it another way.

"Actually I don't know on what basis the health department was preparing its set of basic standards or advice," he said.

"But the legislation clearly indicates that on air pollution the cabinet will give further directives to the Pollution Control Board after a study.

"That study is going on now under over-all supervision of the B.C. Research Council which already has made an interim report and will make its final recommendations to the Pollution Control Board.

"Now, the health department independently from this was devising some projected regulations but Mr. Loffmark was made cognizant (at Monday's cabinet meeting) of the legislation and after considering it he has taken back those proposed health department standards and that's where the matter stands at the moment."

Campbell Declines Comment

Mr. Williston confirmed that cabinet had decided to stick by the legislation which allocates jurisdiction over pollution control to his board.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who with Williston and Loffmark formed a special cabinet subcommittee on pollution the last couple of years, declined to comment on the meeting results.

But he did say: "I'm not surprrised although I have no comment" when told that it appeared Mr. Loffmark would not be making his announcement of tough new standards after all.

Mr. Loffmark first announced his new plan—touching off an obvious behind-the-scenes battle in cabinet—last fall and promised he would not back down on his statutory authority as health minister to protect the health of all B.C. citizens.

Using specific sections of the Health Act which gave him full control over construction of sewers and disposal systems, he forced Richmond municipality to agree to include treatment facilities in its proposed $20 million expansion of sewers dumping effluent into the Strait of Georgia.

(Ironically, the Greater Vancouver Sewer Board today announced it will abide by a government order to install sewer treatment plants by 1975 to clean up the remaining pollution in the Fraser River and lower mainland coast which originally was opposed by the member municipalities and brought tough talk from Mr. Loffmark as well as the Pollution Control Board.)

More Than Sewage Involved

But the health minister promised to go far beyond sewage treatment with the air and water standards for the whole province and originally promised to proclaim them last September.

Since then his staff have been studying, modifying and codifying the specifications for clean air and pure water, completing its work long before Christmas.

But Mr. Loffmark has persistently put off reporters' enquiries as to when he would finally announce the standards —at the same time denying there was any split in cabinet caused by his stand.

Since the new year he told reporters the standards were ready and a press release already was drafted for the announcement which would come "any day now.

Lack of UBC Funds Led to Resignation

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Kenneth Hare, retiring president of the University of British Columbia, today reaffirmed his belief that UBC requires an immediate start on $25,000 000 worth of new buildings and $65,000,000 in other building required for the five-year period ending in 1974.

In an interview from London, England, he said inadequate financial support for UBC was the key reason behind his resignation, announced last weekend.

Dr. Hare declined to directly criticize the provincial government, which finances education.

Asked whether he would have tendered his resignation if more financial aid was given by the government, he replied: "I'd rather not comment on that."

Total Eclipse Hinted For Shaky Socreds

The question no longer is whether the Social Credit government might be defeated at the next election.

The Burnaby-Willingdon byelection Monday gave the first clear hint that the question now is whether Social Credit could disappear as a political force at the next general election.

Those who find it an incredible suggestion that the government party could simply vanish likely were unable to see the signs in 1951 which led to Social Credit materializing from thin air to become the government.

And there are signs emerging—both of symbolism and substance—that B.C. may be about to make another of its periodic political half-gainer-reverse-twist-somersaults which sees the government bellyflop in futile efforts to keep pace.

LORIMER
. . . convincing win

In the sphere of substance, the hard-nosed politicos of all parties claim that practical politics is simply a case of arithmetic—the vote counts inevitably forecast the trend.

Monday's byelection tallies show that the NDP took 49.5 per cent of the vote, Social Credit garnered 26.5 per cent, the Liberals took 21.4 per cent and the Progressive Conservatives attracted 2.6 per cent of the ballots.

Only two years ago in the same riding the picture was very different: NDP 44.6 per cent, Social Credit 40.6 per cent and Liberals 14.8 per

Space Docking Hinted As Russian in Orbit

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia today launched a 41-year-old cosmonaut into earth orbit and unofficial reports surgested another manned spaceship would be sent up to join him.

Moscow radio broke its scheduled programs to announce that Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov, the second Russian in space in three months, went into orbit in his Soyuz 4 spaceship at 10:39 a.m. (2:39 a.m. EST).

The official Soviet news agency Tass quoted Shatalov, a father of two, as "feeling fine."

The unofficial reports, emanating from Soviet sources, indicated that Soyuz 5 craft with another cosmonaut aboard would be sent up to perform joint manoeuvres and possible to attempt a joint docking with Shatalov.

The last Soviet spaceman, Maj.-Gen. Georgy Beregovoy, and his Soyuz 3 craft performed joint manoeuvres with an unmanned craft named Soyuz 2 during a four-day flight in October, 1968, but he did not attempt a docking, already carried out twice earlier in the year by unmanned Soviet craft.

Within 90 minutes of the launching, Moscow television showed videotaped film of the launching of Soyuz 4 and of the interior of the cabin with Shatalov, strapped tightly to his seat, waving at the camera.

This was the first time film of a Soviet space shot has been shown the same day as the launching.

SECOND SATELLITE TRACKED BY GERMANY

BOCHUM (Reuter) — West Germany's Bochum satellite tracking station said today a second Soviet Soyuz satellite may have been launched a few hour after Soyuz IV was sent into orbit around the earth this morning.

Director Heinz Kaminski said the station started receiving signals which did not coincide with Soyuz IV's orbit.

This could either mean that a second satellite was placed in orbit or that unusual conditions were allowing Soyuz's IV's signals to be received here while it is on the other side of the earth, he said.

The Murky Future

WITH MANY EXPERTS SEEing pollution of our environment not only as an inconvenience or health hazard but as a definite threat to man's continued life on this planet, the demands for improvement are now being heard at every level in many lands. The technological triumphs that have enabled man to combat insect and disease problems are themselves turning into defeats; the prodigies of industrial development on which we pride ourselves may themselves prove our undoing.

Although there are many demands to restore lakes, rivers, land and atmosphere to their original natural purity, we may as well recognize that we shall never be able to accomplish this. The only remedy would be to remove almost all the evidences of man's productivity and presence from the earth. The increase in populations alone ensures that our environment must become increasingly affected by wastes of all kinds, and for many of these the cure will be difficult to devise and still more to implement.

A second fact of modern life which we must recognize is that pollution control will become an integral part of the expense of maintaining ourselves on the earth, and that this expense will inevitably increase.

* * *

And a third is that rather than achieve perfect removal of air and water pollution we shall have to be content with holding it to a level which will be generally acceptable by aesthetic as well as health and efficiency standards.

While these considerations imply failure to achieve perfection, they need not connote an inability to impose methods and restrictions which will establish limits of tolerance. But it is obvious that much must be done and many of our heretofore accepted practices must be reassessed.

Recent studies of the effects of pesticides, for instance, indicate that their lethal effects are far more widespread than had been supposed —more severe even than the warnings of Rachel Carson in her Silent Spring. Peregrine falcons, which never come into contact with DDT as applied to crops by man, are being wiped out through accumulations of the poison in the wildlife on which they feed. Scattergun techniques in the use of poisons have eradicated helpful insects as well as harmful ones and upset the balance of nature in scores of ways. Meat and milk eaten by man are found to hold alarming amounts of harmful chemical substances put into circulation by man himself. Obviously a whole new approach to man's interference with the natural world must be initiated.

Industrial processes in many places turn rivers into lifeless, sediment-choked streams; darken the air and threaten to alter climates; kill wildlife and destroy pleasure areas. Even more serious effects are seen in long-term predictions that the oxygen supply of our atmosphere is being diminished with consequent deterioration of the environment on which mankind must depend for life.

* * *

It is only comparatively recently that governments have given attention to such considerations, and even now the reaction is slow and in many cases reluctant. Partly this is failure to realize the magnitude of the problem, partly a desire to avoid interference with the economic machine which we have evolved, and partly, too, an attempt to postpone the great expenses which will be necessary to regain and maintain an acceptable pollution level in many areas.

One estimate puts the amount required to assure clean air and water in the United States for the next 30 years at $5 to $10 billions annually. A parallel estimate for a similar program in Canada up to 1980 is set at $350 to $600 millions a year. These represent major programs which will add substantially to the budgets of governments and industry. But they will prove unavoidable, and they will not lessen by postponement. This is the world we are making.

Back in the Big League

CANADA IS NOT ALONE IN agonizing about what military stance it should take in the world. Japan is in the throes of a national debate something like that touched off by Prime Minister Trudeau's questioning of some of our long-time policies.

At the end of the Second World War Japan was compelled to disband all her armed forces and renounce war forever. Within five years however the situation in the Far East was transformed by the Korean war and the United States was urging Japan to rearm. Thus began the reconstruction of ground, naval and air commands into what is termed the "Self-Defence Forces."

Now the rebuilding has reached the stage of a government decision to build a supersonic fighter-bomber that will have a cruising range reaching China and Siberia. Socialist and other opposition critics have raised a storm but Premier Eisaku Sato is in a strong position, having just won a third term and installed a team of cabinet aides favoring the defence build-up.

Sato will have to pay a price for this venture, however, that could have far-reaching effects on Japanese politics. To cover the cost of producing 130 F-4 Phantom jets and other new weapons he proposes to raise the national defence budget by 12 per cent. There is little doubt that part of the reason for Japan's spectacular post-war economic growth has been the comparatively small amount that has been spent on arms. Now the country appears to be returning to the costly "big league" of defence and the pampered Japanese taxpayer is going to start feeling the pinch. He may not like it.

Don't Turn the Clock Back

IT IS HARD TO FATHOM WHAT Health Minister Loffmark had in mind when he raised the spectre of the death penalty for thrice-convicted narcotics traffickers. Mr. Loffmark didn't exactly say he was in favor of such policy, but said it had been discussed at a meeting of provincial health ministers. Some other ministers have questioned this, but Mr. Loffmark has brought the subject up in any case and it should be quickly squelched.

The evil wrought by drug peddlers can not be over-stated, but that is no justification for an emotional response. Canada long debated the wisdom of capital punishment and decided a year ago to abolish it for a test period of five years. The only exceptions are in the case of a policeman or prison guard murdered while performing his duties. To consider the addition of another category at this juncture would be inadvisable.

Countries everywhere are moving away from the death penalty because they are convinced it is barbaric and fails to act as a deterrent. In the United States, although capital punishment is still possible in 37 of the 50 states, there was not one execution during 1968. The last hanging in Canada was in 1962. It would be a mistake to try to turn back the clock now.

FROM OTTAWA — BY MAURICE WESTERN

Little for Consumers in Kennedy Round

AMONG ill-disposed persons there has long lurked a suspicion that Canadian manufacturers enjoy a good deal more protection than they admit or deserve, and more than is good for the country. It is agreeable to read in a press release that this view is shared by so learned and dispassionate a body as the Economic Council of Canada.

Western

The latest study of the subject, prepared by James Melvin and Bruce Wilkinson, distinguishes between nominal protection—the rates formally set out in the customs tariff—and effective protection for the manufacturer. The latter concept was originally developed, more than a decade ago, by Professor Barber of Winnipeg.

Protection enables a producer to mark his goods up to the prevailing world price plus the import duty. But he is not the sole contributor to the finished produot he sells. In effect he is getting protection on the value he adds, through his investment of capital and labor, to the raw or partially finished materials or parts which go into the merchandise being marketed. Plainly, his advantage will be greatest if he can obtain these working materials tariff-free.

Suppose there are no tariffs and that the Canadian manufacturer adds 40 cents in value to a finished product worth $1. A tariff of 20 per cent would increase the final value to $1.20. But this added value is 50 per cent of the manufacturer's contribution and this is his effective protection.

Effective Protection

Various cases are possible. Effective protection may be higher or lower than nominal protection; it may, where all tariffs are equal, be identical, or it may be negative if the manufacturer has to pay, in total, duties higher than those from which he benefits.

The economists first examined pre-Kennedy Round tariffs for 133 industries. They found that effective rates were generally higher—from 1½ to two times nominal rates.

While space forbids a detailed examination, the curious reader of the Melvin-Wilkinson report will turn compassionately to those industries which suffer most loudly and habitually in public. Consider, for example, electronics. The nominal rate on major [illegible] was 19.7 per cent; effective protection by one calculation was 31.4, by another 41.5. On household radios and TVs, the nominal rate of 20.7 contrasted with effective rates between 36 and 51.4.

The textile story is roughly comparable. Our knitting mills, for example, were supposed to enjoy protection of 31.1 per cent against the encroaching foreigners. Effective rates were by one calculation 64.9 per cent, by another 77.1. Fur goods, with nominal rates of 25 per cent, actually enjoyed effective protection of 98.9 or, by another reckoning 103.4.

It is of interest that very large discrepancies appeared in the case of flour, and also vegetable oil mills. For the former the nominal rate of 8.8 per cent compared with effective protection of 31.9 (or 38.1). Nominal rate of 4.7 was in even more startling contrast to effective rates of 34.5 and 35.9.

The Kennedy Round is supposed to bring about liberating changes—see any speech of Mr. Mitchell Sharp in his former role as trade minister and negotiator. To obtain a clearer view of the new situation, the investigators examined 32 of the above industries. They found that in 40 per cent of them, there was little change in effective rates. In one-third the level of effective protection was increased. In only one-tenth of the cases did the reduction exceed 10 per cent.

In addition to the protection afforded by the government, the subject of this latest study, our threatened manufacturers enjoy what might be termed natural protection. In competition with the foreign supplier, they benefit from a variety of cost differentials. Serving a home market, they save in transportation, on packaging, sometimes on insurance, frequently on advertising, and so on. In many cases such items would add up to a substantial advantage, even in conditions of free trade.

No Great Hazard

Taking all these things into consideration, the hazards of the Kennedy Round do not appear very great. As the investigators observe: "Negotiations which result in little or no reduction in Canadian tariffs, while possibly a victory for the negotiators, do little to spur on Canadian manufacturers to improved performance."

In the words of the release: "The Economic Council believes that this relatively high level of protection inhibits greater specialization and longer production runs in Canadian manufacturing. And this situation, in turn, increases costs and restrains productivity improvements in manufacturing, an area in which the Canada-U.S. disparity in output per employed person is wider than for the economy as a whole."

What will consumers get from a "victory for the negotiators"? Obviously, not very much.

FROM PARIS — BY C. L. SULZBERGER

Israeli Lesson in Losing Friends

ANY professor of strategy could cite either the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia or the Israeli raid on Beirut airport as simultaneously embodying the acme of what to do and what not to do. Each exercise in its own way was militarily perfect and politically insane.

The Russians spent so much time last summer manoeuvering the terrain that when they finally decided to strike they fooled everyone — friends, enemies and Czechs. The takeover was swift and efficient, aided by carefully selected fifth columnists. But when the dirty work was done, it soon became plain that Moscow had thought of everything except what to do with Czechoslovakia once it had it.

Likewise, on a much smaller scale, Israel's impeccable helicopter raid on Beirut airport was magnificently competent but politically senseless. It achieved no basic and enduring purpose; indeed, the reverse may yet prove true.

Russia lost an ally (because the Czechoslovakian people aren't going to forget the experience) and sacrificed its reputation for detente and international respectability. Israel lost the tacit tolerance of Lebanon, hitherto least hostile of its neighbors, and a great deal of foreign support.

The U.N. security council unanimously condemned the action and, although the United States didn't interrupt its program to reinforce Israeli air strength, Washington was sharply critical. Even Britain, sympathetic to Israel ever since the Suez War, expressed vivid distaste and took the occasion to review its sale of anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan.

France has been increasingly anti-Israel ever since the Algerian question was settled and Paris decided to regain Arab support. The Beirut raid ended even any vestigial pretence of French neutrality in Palestine. Now de Gaulle has ordered an embargo on deliveries of any military equipment to its former little ally; not only the 50 Mirage jets for which Israel has paid but which it won't receive; even spare parts for old equipment can no longer be sent.

Peace Pulpit

There is a curious relationship between the political aftermath of the Soviet and Israeli actions. Moscow has been doing all it can since Aug. 21 to revive a peace-loving world image. The mere fact that the Middle East situation has perceptibly worsened gives Russia a chance to preach there in the name of peace.

The Middle East is so complicated, tense, rich and important that it particularly interests the Great Powers, and Soviet envoys have a legitimate excuse to seek new contacts in Washington, London and Paris. Whether Moscow's present flurry of activity helps prospects of settlement or not, the appearance is what counts right now for Kremlin image-makers.

Likewise, Israel's brutual riposte for acts of piracy against its planes diminished its world support. The Russians, eager to erase the stain of Czechoslovakia, successfully urged France to advance the date of a scheduled bilateral meeting. Moscow then offered large enough contracts to French industry to partially offset losses suffered in the arms embargo against Israel, an important French customer.

The last thing Israel wished was to have its Beirut raid help Russia out of its self-dug Czechoslovakian pit. Yet this, paradoxically enough, is the principal political result. Soviet ambassadors have since been making propaganda hay out of the lowering Middle East crisis.

Four-Power Framework

The probable framework for an eventual conference on Palestine would be four powered, as always envisioned by France. If there should be a four-power adjudication now, Israel could at best expect support from only Washington and London. Paris, previously a reluctant neutral, today is quite as pro-Arab as Moscow — or, at least, as anti-Israeli.

This leaves Jerusalem in an acutely difficult spot. If there is no serious new diplomatic initiative another round of war seems inevitable, sooner rather than later. With its French-made airforce deprived of spare parts and the first American F-4 fighters expected only late this year, Israel's technical advantage is perceptibly shrinking. Now its political backing has started to diminish. That, in the end, could prove equally important.

It is an odd quirk of current history than two military perfections should have been so politically imperfect. It is an even odder quirk that because of the second, Israel's, the first, Russia's, may be forgotten far sooner than would normally have been the case.

Hot air is better than steam or hot water for heating purposes. This seemed to be the conclusion reached by members of the school board today. Attention was drawn by superintendent Paul to the fact that while two schools using hot air were warm enough for pupils to continue studies during the cold spell, all other schools were closed. The plumbers were still trying to locate the trouble, he said.

Appreciation

Now that our city's streets and thoroughfares have been restored to normal conditions and traffic flows unimpeded in its normal channels, it seems only fitting that we pedestrians should express our appreciation of the general courtesy and consideration shown by vehicular traffic throughout those few trying days. Forced by long stretches of uncleared sidewalks, which were usable only by the nimble and sure-footed, we were often obliged to use the roadways, where strictly we had no right to be, and the vehicular traffic was certainly most careful and co-operative. This was cordially appreciated by those of us who, like the Old Grey Mare, "just ain't what we used to be," and made the necessary business of getting around much less exhausting than it would otherwise have been.—William H. Currie, Aberdeen Hotel.

"Battle of Mines"

I must congratulate you on John Mika's article "We must win Battle of Mines," setting forth statements made by Opposition Leader Mr. Rober Strachan. I feel a subject of such great importance should have been on Page 1 and not Page 21.

The problems of land, air and water pollution are of great interest to a great many serious-thinking people today, and it seems to me members of government who devote time and energy to fighting serious exploitation of our resources in one way or another, should be given help by the news media, to better inform the public. This article made a serious impact upon me in view of the fact that I had watched a documentary on strip mining in the United States and parts of Canada.—C. M. Renaud, 349 Island Highway.

Carter Needed

I would like to refer to the letter from your correspondent Mrs. A. C. Cooper, "Raise Income-tax."

Mrs. Cooper follows the brain-washed pattern of blaming our troubles on "men asking for higher wages" and no thought is given to the fantastic profits being made by the banks, trust and other financial institutions and in fact by all industry especially the food stores. Thousands of dollars are made daily in real estate and other financial transactions and not one nickel of tax is charged on such transactions.

What we require more than anything is an implementation of the Carter tax proposals; at present we have the most unjust form of taxation in the democratic Western world. However as long as the present system of political funds continues there will be no change, as those who pay the piper call the tune. It is only natural that those who pay large sums into the coffers of the major political parties are not interested in any change which migh help the "little Joe" and upset the present unfair "status quo." — M. P. B. Wrjxon, 1254 Rockland.

Time for Restraint

Calgary Herald

Calgary aldermen are being invited to raise their own pay from $4,100 to $5,900 a year.

If they have any self-respect they will reject the invitation.

The job of alderman is not worth that much.

The reasons Mayor Leslie advanced in support of his recommendation may appeal to some aldermen. But they are unlikely to bring tears to the eyes of overburdened taxpayers — tears of sympathy for the aldermen, that is.

For example, that stale old proposition that, if the job doesn't offer an attractive wage, good men will not run for council. Really good men, men interested in rendering two or three years of public service to their city in terms of meetings now and then to keep civic policy on the rails, are not thinking in terms of how much money they will make out of it.

What salaries in the $6,000 a year range are more likely to do is attract people of lesser stature to seek seats on council. . . .

The tendency to boost pay in municipal circles, both on the appointive and elective levels in this city, is going beyond all reasonable limits.

There is not a better group to set a good example of restraint than the elected officials themselves.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, JAN. 14, 1969 —PAGE 11

Arthur Mayse

Had anyone predicted 20 years ago that The Saturday Evening Post wouldn't live to greet the 70s, nobody in the magazine trade would have taken him seriously.

The Post, with its enormous advertising revenue and readership, was the queen of the weeklies. Gibraltar would fall sooner!

But last week, despite all efforts to save her, the journal that claimed Ben Franklin as founder ended her struggle to survive. With her Feb. 8 issue off the presses, she succumbed to starvation, at the age of 148, in alien New York.

It was a sad end for the Post, whose home through most of her years overlooked Philadelphia's Independence Square. Even though she and I had no recent dealings, I'm sorry to see her go. In her long prime, she was the greatest of the fiction-carrying popular magazines, and with her demise, an era has ended.

In her years of power and pride, she ran two serial instalments each week, along with four short stories and sometimes a novelette. It was a fiction banquet unmatched among her competitors, and it offered to the world a set of story-people not easily forgotten.

★

Tugboat Annie was one, and Glencannon, the Scots engineer of the Inchcliffe Castle, another.

Remember the Earthworm Tractor Company and its letter-writing salesman, and Canadian Ross Annett's "Little Babe"?

From midshipman through to admiral, Horatio Hornblower paced those pages.

And didn't Erle Stanley Gardner's Perry Mason solve his first case—The Cat and the Canary—in Post?

Those were "series" characters, but Post also shone as a magazine whose doors were open to the beginner. Through much of its life, its editors made a boast that no manuscript in its "slush-pile" of unsolicited contributions went unread.

They were hard to please; but when they turned up a writer who could cut their mustard, they were generous of time and effort in bringing him along.

By this I don't mean that they coddled him. Far from it! If he or the agent who represented him turned in a clinker, it would be slung back no matter how many stories he had sold to Post before.

Although the magazine paid top prices, it rarely dispensed praise, and I cherish acceptances far more gruffly worded than its rejections.

★

Like most who gained entry to its pages, I came in by the slush-pile route. In the years that followed, I made it through the Post's barbed wire about 40 times—from writer's superstition, I've never run off a complete total.

This long association was not always sunshiny, and for one 18-month period, we weren't even on speaking terms.

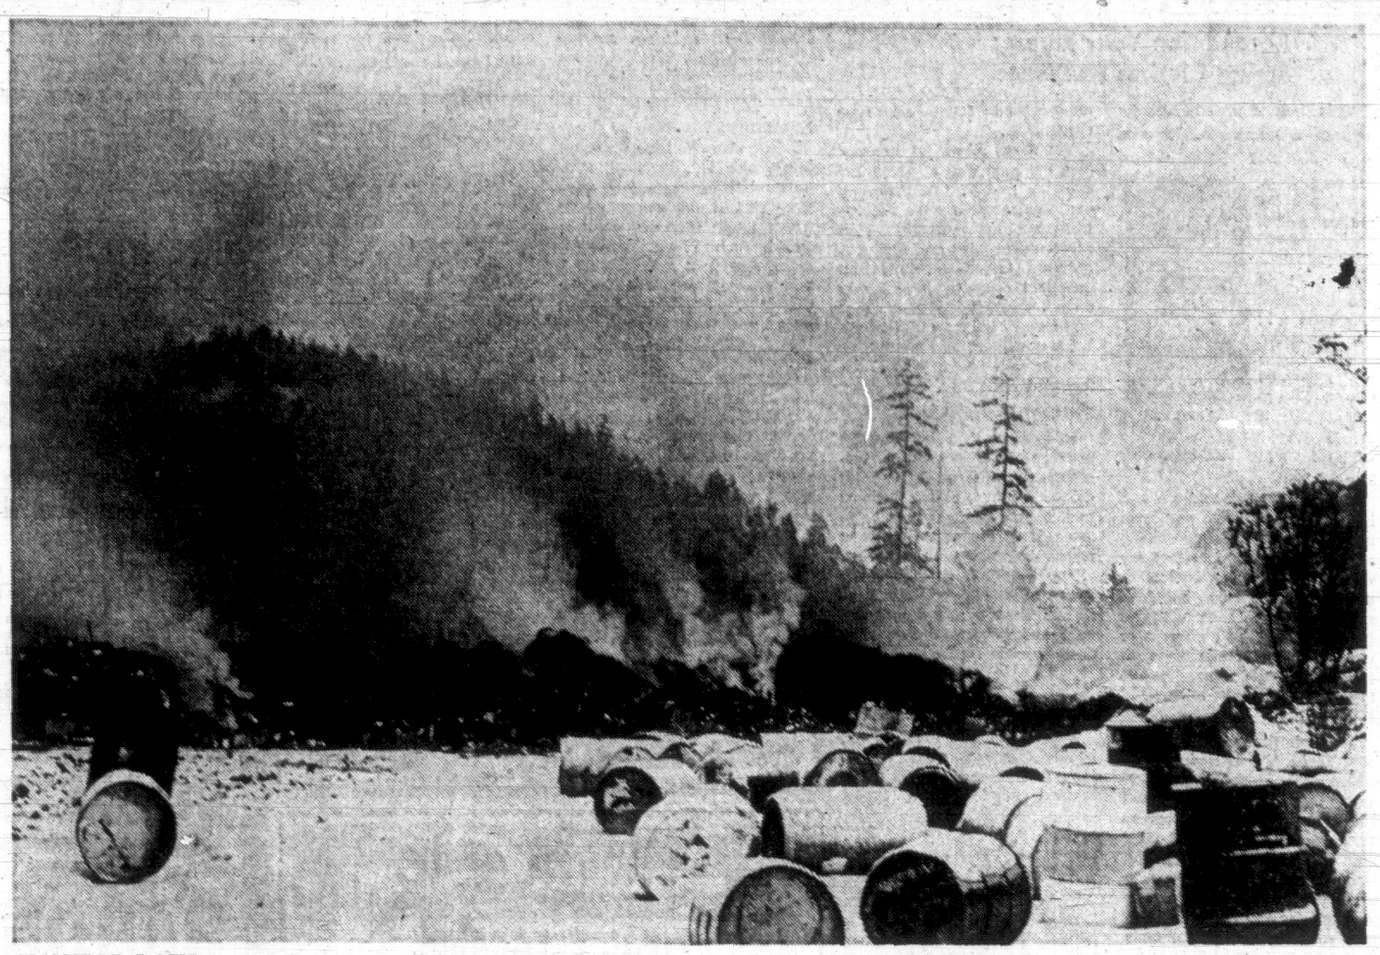

But I remember Post much better for other reasons, and the chief of these is the pleasure of meeting and working with two of the best fiction editors in the business.

One is E. N. "Erd" Brandt, a man tall, lean and wonderfully kind. The American Civil War was his study, classic cars his hobby, and magazine fiction his love. Erd Brandt retired some years ago, but Bob Murphy—writer, story-doctor and naturalist in his spare time—is now a productive free-lance with several books to his credit.

They were good men, and part of a crack editorial staff. But television drained the advertising which is a magazine's lifeblood, and no amount of circulation can compensate for such a loss.

The Saturday Evening Post figured large in my working life for a long time, and even though she was subjected in her decline to changes that went far beyond the dropping of her Norman Rockwell covers, I retained a feeling for her.

Many magazines have perished in the past two decades, but this was the best of them.

SMOKING DAYS are numbered for garbage dumps on Millstream Road but this morning they were giving off heavy defiant screen. It is indicated the two dumps will go out of business because they won't operate under no-burning edict.

Millstream Dumps To Close

Operations Doomed By Ban on Burning

Burning of garbage at two dumps in the Highland District north of Langford is coming to an end.

When this happens, only one garbage dump will be left to serve southern Vancouver Island—at Hartland Road, north of Prospect Lake.

Last year the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health ruled that burning at garbage dumps will end Jan. 1, and after that date it must be compacted and covered.

This is being done at the Hartland Road dump, owned by Victoria Disposal Company.

The two Millstream Road dumps—Scafe's Dump Garbage Disposal and Highland Sanitary Centre Garbage Disposal—continued burning in defiance of the health board regulations.

Reports circulated this morning that garbage burning was coming to an end and rather than meet the new regulations, the dumps will close.

W. D. Scafe was not available for commen. There was no answer at the dump telephone this morning.

R. F. Rant, who runs the other dump, also was not available. But his wife said the dump is "more or less officially shut."

The Millstream Road dumps not only serve the unincorporated areas of Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and Sooke, where 20,000 people live, but also receive garbage from the urban areas and from sawmills and other private companies.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, confirmed this morning that a group went to the dumps Monday to inspect them. The group found conditions the same as before, with burning continuing.

But he denied one report that the health board has ordered the dumps to close.

"We have issued no letter other than the letter of last November saying they will have to stop burning on Jan. 1," he said.

"We are waiting to see what arrangements they make. There have been a lot of complaints that we've closed these dumps but we have not taken any action yet."

The procedure for action, should it be taken, is to lay an information and it would then be up to a magistrate to rule, he added.

Dr. Whitbread also said two municipalities are in the process of transferring from Millstream to Hartland Road but he declined to identify them.

"We have not ordered them to close," he said emphatically. "It is up to them to comply with the regulations.

Snow Socks Up-Island; Schools, Industry Hit

HISTORIC LIGHTS COME DOWN

Seven strings of decorative downtown street lights raised 32 years ago to commemorate the crowning of George VI are coming down.

City council's traffic committee supported the recommendation of traffic engineer David Campbell today after he said the clamps and bolts attaching the strings to buildings have deteriorated and now represent a hazard.

The colored lights stretch across Fisgard and Johnson streets between Store and Government streets. They are all that remain of the display erected for the coronation in 1937. The others came down when much of the downtwn wiring went underground.

Mr. Campbell's report said the city has turned the lights on each Christmas at the request of merchants but an inspection this year uncovered the shaky links.

He said he could not recommend spending the money needed for repair and suggested the light strings were no longer compatible with modern Christmas decorations.

EVENING RATES

In other business, the traffic committee decided to recommend to the parking authority that a charge of 25 cents for evening parking be standardized through all three downtown parking facilities. The parking authority had asked permission to install a meter in the Bastion parking building for those using it in the evening.

The public works committee agreed to increase patrols of the Centennial parking building after hearing a letter from a woman complaining of an incident last month.

The writer said the elevator was immobilized when someone defecated in it. The building's elevator has been a constant target for vandals and is out of order much of the time.

The committee approved an increase of from 25 cents to 50 cents a cubic yard for those disposing of garbage at the city garbage wharf on Store Street.

20,000 Loggers Forced Out; Schools Close at Port Alberni

The capital region continues to keep a relative weather calm while districts all around are losing theirs.

Motorists were forced down to a 20-mile-an-hour limit as they crawled over the treacherous Malahat and into periodic blizzard conditions in Duncan and the Cowichan Valley.

In Port Alberni, schools were closed because buses could not leave the main highway to pick up students this morning.

In Vancouver, rush-hour traffic slowed to a crawl after a heavy snowfall throughout the lower mainland. In places up to five inches of fresh snow were recorded, causing long lineups of traffic on main routes as well as side roads.

Throughout the province, thousands were late for work and weather continued to hamper industry and schools.

LOGGERS HIT

Some 20,000 loggers were idled and Island operations were at a virtual standstill. A MacMillan Bloedel spokesman reported only skeleton operations are being maintained. Crown Zellerbach added that they are not engaged in any falling operations.

North Cowichan and Duncan got another two to three inches of snow overnight.

Lake Cowichan appeared to be hardest hit. Six inches were added to the 62 that have fallen since Jan. 1 and chains, not snow tires alone, are required on most roads.

FREEZING RAIN

Different parts of Victoria got a light snowfall overnight, other parts were touched with freezing rain.

There was even lightning, as an unstable weather system off the Island's northwest coast spawned thunderstorms and sent them whizzing in a long curve towards the mainland.

In Burnaby, the freak storms gave senior secondary school students the day off after the lightning affected electrical circuits which operate the school's heating plant.

The villain is a low-pressure system off the coast that is pulling frigid air from the north, sweeping it over the relatively warm ocean then sending it in unstable blotches towards the southeast.

ALL AT ONCE

The result can be as varied as the snow, rain and hail that were all falling at once over Vancouver during the night.

Heaviest snowfalls have been in the Island's interior. Port Alberni has been hit with 13 inches since the weekend bringing the total in the Alberni Valley centre to nearly 64 inches for the year.

The Tofino - Ucluelet Highway is barely passable and motorists are advised to use chains. Road crews kept Gold River's link with the east coast open despite blizzards Monday. Bulldozers were needed to clear streets between nine-foot drifts.

Despite heavy going nearby, the Trans-Canada Highway to Nanaimo and the Island highway north are mostly in good condition. At Nanaimo and Campbell River all schools were open and officials reported buses had no difficulties making their pickups this morning.

The new snowfall brings Vancouver's total for the winter to nearly 40 inches, considerably above normal. In December, 23.9 inches were recorded, compared to the 3.5 inches normally expected.

Temperatures in Victoria are expected to range between 32 and 40 Wednesday as more light snow showers and rain are predicted.

Aldermen Refuse To Back Down On Parking Ban

Victoria city traffic committee stood fast in the face of a pressure lobby this morning and refused to lift a ban on overnight parking.

The ban goes into effect Wednesday night with only a slight change in the hours.

Nick Renard, manager of the Olympic Hotel, led a large delegation of hotel and restaurant owners to challenge Ald. Harold Olafson chairing his first traffic committee meeting since taking office.

Mr. Renard said a parking ban between the hours of 1 a.m. and 5 a.m. would be "catastrophic to certain hotels" which would be bound to lose their night trade to other areas.

FORCED TO CLOSE

Tony Else, manager of AJ's dine and dance establishment, said the ban would virtually force him to close his doors.

"It would have the immediate effect of putting me out of business," he said.

The night spot favored by young swingers operates until 2 a.m.

Ald. Olafson asked if an adjustment in the starting hour of the parking ban from 1 a.m. to 2:30 a.m. would help.

Mr. Else answered that he would have no objection if the hours were adjusted, but added that he still sympathized with the plight of small hotel operators who lacked parking facilities for their guests.

A. B. Auchinvole representing the Century Inn urged the committee to consider the plight of the downtown hotel operator already hard hit by cut-price motels on the fringes of the city.

"Occupancy of our rooms during the winter months has become a matter of simple survival," he said. "A total ban on parking in the dowritown area for overnight periods will make our position just that much more difficult. It isn't generally admitted but Victoria is a 90-day town. For the other nine months of the year the downtown hotel operator has to struggle really hard to survive."

The Century has limited parking for customers and provides car-jockeys for customers once the hotel lot is full. During the night hours they use city streets, the Centennial Square parking facility or private lots.

UNMOVED

Mr. Auchinvole said the four-hour ban could only hurt the hotel trade.

But the committee was unmoved by the plea.

Mayor Hugh Stephen noted that every time city council tried to take a progressive step there were howls from the business community that disaster would follow.

"Last summer we had many complaints from tourists, the people who deal with you, that our city was very dirty," he said. "We listened to those complaints and are trying to do something about them.

"I disagree with you when you say Victoria doesn't need to sweep its streets at night, that it is a clean city.

'DIRTY CITY'

"Last summer Victoria was a dirty city, of that there is no doubt."

After the delegation left Ald. Olafson suggested a change in the total ban times.

"I have talked with the city engineer and the traffic engineer and Mr. (James) Garnett assured me that if all cars are off the streets the sweeping and cleaning operation can be done in three hours or less," he said.

Mayor Stephen won a unanimous vote to support his motion that the ban go into effect on schedule with the adjusted times of 2:30 a.m. to 5:30 a.m.

In accepting the motion Ald. Olafson said he had a great deal of sympathy for the plight of hotel operators lacking any type or parking facility.

"But they all have parking facilities within a block or a block and a half of their establishments," he said. "It is a problem, but it is a problem they must solve."

For the first few weeks of the ban city police will be instructed to take a generous attitude to violators by posting warning tickets on windshields.

After that period of education a minimum $5 fine will be imposed.

RADICAL FILMS ON VIEW

The National Film Board has produced a handy-dandy kit of six films for the social revolutionary which are to be previewed at a public screening Jan. 21 at 8 p.m. in the board's theatre, 911 Wharf.

Originally intended for professionals in social welfare and community development, the board will rent out the films which "can be readily used by minority groups and individuals interested in social change" in Canada.

The form part of an NFB program called "Challenge for Change." The new series focuses on Saul Alinsky, Chicago's Industrial Area Foundation head who, as a professional activist, has led minority groups into battle against various establishments in Canada and the U.S.

The films deal with the Alinsky philosophy, methods of organization, results and the continuing responsibilities of activist groups within a community.

Expansion Approved At Rocky Pt. School

The provincial treasury board has authorized expenditure of $27,000 for expansion of the Rocky Point elementary school and $10,000 for relocation of the Happy Valley school, it was announced today.

School Official To Retire

Joseph Chell, superintendent of the Greater Victoria school district, told a special meeting of the school board Monday night that he will retire this summer.

His announcement was not unexpected. He will be 65 this year and has served as superintendent since the resignation of John Gough in 1966.

Board chairman Dr. Carron Jameson will head a committee of trustees to confer with the deputy education minister on a successor. Front runner is A. J. Longmore, the assistant district superintendent, but the job is a government appointment. The school board is permitted to pick from a list offered by the education department.

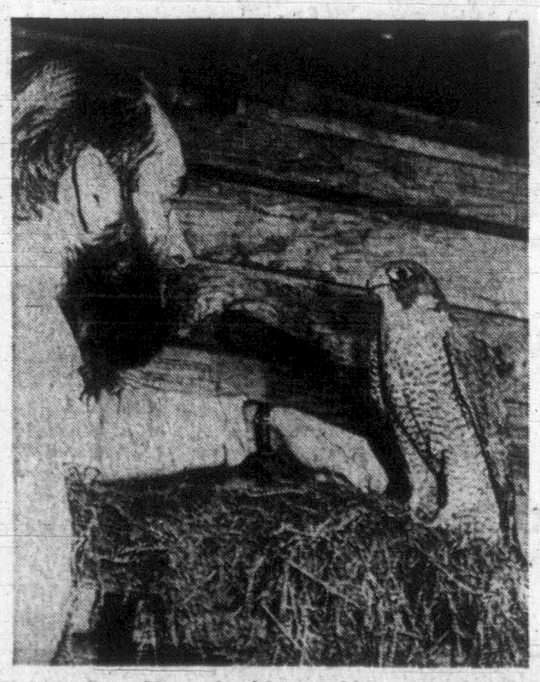

Young Wardens Attend Workshop

Twenty Junior Forest Wardens from throughout Vancouver Island attended a workshop held Sunday in Nanaimo.

The organization is sponsored by the Canadian Forestry Association of B.C. to instruct youths on conservation of natural resources.

Leaders and counsellors exchanged ideas on club activities at the workshop.

Lecture to Examine Hard-Luck Falcons

The Provincial Museum today announced a series of illustrated lectures at two-week intervals will begin Friday at 8 p.m. in the Newcombe Auditorium.

Leading off the series, entitled Heritage Court Presents, will be Dave Hancock, director of the Wildlife Conservation Centre at Island View Beach.

His lecture will deal with the adventures and misadventures experienced during the past summer studying eagles, peregrine falcons and other wildlife on the west coast of Vancouver Island and on the northern coast of the province.

Mr Hancock said this morning he welcomes the chance to give this lecture because it will help further public edutation in wildlife conservation.

He said he is especially concerned about peregrine falcons and that a special research project is being carried out at the Wildlife Conservation Centre to study captive propagation.

"Peregrines have been disappearing around the world," he said. "This is primarily due to pesticide poisoning and human disturbance of their breeding grounds.

"As with the whooping crane it has become necessary to undertake studies of captive propagation as one technique to ensure propagation of the species.

He said this sort of a study has not been done previously because it takes three years for a peregrine to mature and five more to breed.

"We have set up a number of breeding pens, but it's going to be a long-term project," he added.

Admission to all lectures is free.

Educators To Meet In City

About 200 educators will meet in Victoria Jan. 27-29 to discuss education matters including student power and school research, Fred Whitworth, director of the Canadian Council for Research in Education, said in Ottawa today.

Mr. Whitworth said the conference will be mainly a discussion forum for representatives of provincial education departments, university education faculties, educational associations and school boards.

Ask The Times

Q. I am curious to know the significance of the gold charms worn by most Catholics.—G.P.

A. A Catholic priest reports that these medallions, usually carrying an engraving of a saint, have no value in themselves but act as reminders of the faith. The charms are usually blessed, a term implying their dedication to a spiritual purpose.
